AWAIT ETTOR VERDICT

JEALOUSY IS DENIED BY ELSIE RAYMOND

AUGUSTA, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond, the central figure in Maine's greatest murder mystery, today went on the witness stand at her trial for the death of Mattie Hackett.

Mrs. Raymond appeared calm, and although pale she betrayed no emotion. She answered the questions of her attorney very readily and without the slightest hesitancy. There was intense silence in the court when she was called to the witness stand.

As she faced the big crowd she smiled faintly. Every juror watched her closely and listened intently to every word. Attorney Morey conducted the direct examination.

Q.—What is your name? A.—Elsie Hobbs Raymond.

Q.—Where were you born? A.—Turner.

Q.—Your age? A.—Twenty-three.

Q.—Attended schools in Turner? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you go to Readfield to live? A.—1908.

Q.—And you met your husband there? A.—Yes.

Q.—When were you married? A.—1909.

Q.—Where did you live in Readfield? A.—In the Redgley house.

Q.—How many children have you? A.—Two.

Q.—When was the first child born? A.—September, 1905.

Q.—And the second? A.—Five years ago.

Q.—What size shoe do you wear? A.—4½.

Tries on Shoes in Court.

Harry Hersey, a shoe clerk in the store of F. L. Hersey in Augusta, was called by the defence. He brought a pair of shoes numbered 4½. Attorney Morey addressing the court said:

"I want Mrs. Raymond to put on these shoes." Mrs. Raymond had no difficulty in putting on the shoes.

Q.—Where did you get the tan shoes that have been mentioned? A.—In Hallowell. Charles Emery got them for me.

Q.—When were they bought? A.—Summer of 1906.

Q.—What size were they? A.—Four and one-half.

Q.—How long did you wear them? A.—All that season and part of next.

Q.—What did you do with them? A.—I threw them with other rubbish.

Q.—Is it your custom to burn rubbish?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And you burned the shoes? A.—Yes.

Q.—What else did you burn?

Q.—What else did you burn? A.—Rubbish, old paper, etc.

Q.—How long had they been discarded when you burned them? A.—One or two weeks.

Q.—On the night of the Mattie Hackett murder did your husband go home a little after 7?

A.—He did.

Q.—Did you speak to him? A.—We had a few words about money. I wanted some.

Q.—Why did you want money?

A.—I wanted to do some sewing and prepare for what was coming.

Q.—You didn't get any money?

A.—No, and I felt badly about it.

Q.—You were not angry? A.—Oh, no.

Q.—Direct went out? A.—Yes, about 720.

Q.—What did you do? A.—In a

L SUPERINTENDENTS FREED OF PERJURY

Judge Brown, in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court, today quashed the perjury indictments against the six Elevated superintendents. The indictments grew out of charges that the superintendents had given statements under oath before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

The superintendents indicted were Joseph L. Webber, Thomas E. Williams, Karl S. Barnes, John A. Smith, Herbert A. Pusho and John H. Harrington.

J. P. MORGAN, JR., IS BACK FROM EUROPE

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—J. P. Morgan, Jr., returned home today on the North German Lloyd steamship George Washington, after an absence of two months.

SHIP FOUNDERS AT NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 25.—The three-masted schooner Hortense of Bangor, Captain Clark, was blown from her anchorage last night and sank early this morning inside the harbor breakwater. The captain, mate, two men and a cook were taken off by the oyster dredger Americus and brought here. The schooner was coal laden, bound for Bangor.

WOODS HOLE, Nov. 25.—All shipping is tied up, the outside fishing fleet driven to harbor for shelter, and at least one vessel piled up on the shore by a fifty-five-mile gale which struck here at break of day.

The government schooner Miss Rowen, with Captain Samuel Joseph and seven men aboard, was driven ashore on the east side of Tarpaulin Bay while trying to reach the harbor. She is lying in an easy berth, however, and will be floated at high tide.

Anchored between Falmouth and Hedge Fence, the seas breaking over them and half hidden from sight by the swirling snow, are four unidentified barges and two tugs. The five-masted schooner Fanny May Parker is anchored near them.

The dredger Navesink was driven from her position on Stonehorse Head early today, and when last seen was trying to make harbor at Vineyard.

SNELL SLAIN, SAY FRIENDS

William C. Snell, treasurer of the William F. Mosser Leather Company of Boston, whose body was found in a hotel room in Chicago Saturday, and who was at first believed to have been a suicide, may have been a victim of foul play, according to a dispatch from Chicago. It was stated that Boston relatives were expected in Chicago today. They were expected to be called before the coroner to assist in the investigation of the mystery of Snell's death.

Snell, who had lived with his wife and two children at No. 11 Waverly street, Brookline, was found clutching a revolver in his hand. The police reported he was a suicide. However, evidence which has come to light since the discovery of the body indicated foul play. Friends of the dead man insisted. There were no powder marks on Snell's face nor any powder burns near the bullet wound in the temple. It was pointed out that had Snell shot himself in all likelihood the powder must have burned the skin.

Friends of Snell claimed that it was his custom to carry a much larger sum of money than was found in his clothes. His valuables were found intact. No note was left by the dead man. Snell had registered under the name of A. G. Clarke of Chicago.

FINNEGAN IS SUSPENDED BY EVERETT

David A. Finnegan, supervisor of the assessing division of the Boston Building Department, was suspended today by Building Commissioner Arthur G. Everett, immediately following a conference between Mayor Fitzgerald, Corporation Counsel Corbett and the commissioner regarding the report of the Finance Commission in which the commissioner and the building department are severely scored.

The suspension of Finnegan was the first result of the Finance Commission's drastic report. It was expected that further action would be taken in regard to certain building department employees.

Another important result was the decision of Mayor Fitzgerald and Commissioner Everett to enforce rigidly all the building laws of the city and to make wholesale prosecutions where property owners fail to comply with recommendations for needed improvements. This decision meets the demand made by the AMERICAN, and the public generally a month ago.

American Demanded Inquiry.

The AMERICAN probed the building department following a series of building collapses, in which a number of men lost their lives, and demanded immediate action. The investigation and report of the Finance Commission followed, and today came the first step toward a cleaning up in the building department and a rigid enforcement of the city's building laws.

Among the others censured by the Finance Commission is Commissioner Everett. In the report it is held that Everett has not been active enough in hunting down rumors of graft in his department and that he has failed to maintain discipline "in a

DOCTORS PLEAD FOR AUTO STAND

There was a full representation of well known physicians at City Hall today when the street commissioners gave a hearing on the question of amending the traffic rules so that doctors may be exempt from the twenty-minute rule when obliged to leave their machines standing in front of their offices or homes.

Last week a petition containing 865 names of Boston physicians was filed with the board. Most of the trouble appears to have been centred in the Back Bay district, and most of the complaints against physicians were received from that section.

Dr. L. R. S. Crandon said that a doctor could not respond with that promptitude that the public would like if he is not permitted to leave his automobile standing before his home or office. If he has to send his auto to a garage much valuable time is lost.

Dr. Henry Jackson spoke of the difficulties of having to go to a garage.

Dr. Eliot B. Brackett said that doctors were not using their machines for pleasure but for the benefit of patients.

Dr. C. Shattuck of Boston also suggested that doctors be permitted to leave their autos in side streets or in places where the public would not be inconvenienced.

William A. Thibodeau of the Automobile Legal Association spoke in favor of the privilege.

Dr. Henry L. Crocker, former city treasurer, admitted that he was largely responsible for the enforcement of the twenty-minute rule of late. He said that he was obliged to do this because the standing autos before his home made it impossible for him to drive up to the entrance.

D. C. Tiffany, of the Tiffany Company garage owners, objected unless this privilege was extended to other operators.

Dr. Baker of the Electric Vehicle Club, raised a similar objection.

Elliot C. Post asked that the privilege be extended also to owners of electric cars.

The chairman stated that the board would take the petition under consideration.

SCHOONER ASHORE.

NEWPORT, Nov. 25.—The schooner Gypsum Emperor, Captain Corman, lumber laden, from Nova Scotia to New York went ashore on Bonnett Reef near Dutch Island. She was floated at daylight by the Scott Wrecking Company of New London and will proceed when the gale subsides.

SAUGUS AUTO CRASH VICTIMS TELL OF RIDE

Behind the automobile accident at North Saugus in which three young women and three young men were hurled out, and some of them seriously injured, was one incident, the celebration of Harvard's 20 to 0 victory over Yale Saturday.

The three young women were Miss Alice Collins, of No. 111 Hancock street, Everett; Miss Alice Norton and Miss Kitty Burns, both of Boston.

The young men in the party were William F. Hathway, of No. 16 Rickenrath street, Boston; a friend named Doane and another young man whose name has not been learned.

Miss Collins and Hathaway—the latter the owner of the touring car that was wrecked—were injured the worst. Miss Collins was struck over the eye, and it was feared at first that her skull was fractured. She was also hurt otherwise. She is at the Whidden Memorial Hospital in Everett. Her condition is not serious.

Hathway is in the Eliot Hospital in Boston, badly cut and bruised. Miss Burns fractured one wrist. The others were cut or bruised.

All three young women work at the same place in Boston. They are girls of splendid reputation. Miss Burns was engaged to cut his aerial furbelows with a die, and, with both hands manacled and chains dangling, fled up the dock and to the East Boston police station. He pleaded to be freed.

That is how British Consul-General Lay happened to thresh out the matter today. Consul Lay thought Ledbury should be shown Hope, as the other members of the crew were sympathetic.

ADVISES LENIENCY FOR MUTINEER WHO ESCAPED IN CHAINS

After a hearing on the troubles aboard the British steamer St. Quentin, British Consul-General Frederick P. Lay today advised Captain Aitken to give Thomas Hope, the alleged mutinous fireman, another chance. He told Captain Aitken that if Hope caused any more trouble at sea to turn him over to the British authorities at the first port available.

The St. Quentin reached this port yesterday with Hope in irons. He was handcuffed and chained to the wall of a cell below decks, charged with offensive conduct and attempting to incite the crew to mutiny.

As soon as the steamship docked he manacled to cut his aerial furbelows with a die, and, with both hands manacled and chains dangling, fled up the dock and to the East Boston police station. He pleaded to be freed.

That is how British Consul-General Lay happened to thresh out the matter today. Consul Lay thought Ledbury should be shown Hope, as the other members of the crew were sympathetic.

DEATH OF CARRIE JORDAN COMPLICATES AFFAIRS OF BANK

HARTFORD, Ct., Nov. 25.—The death of Carrie M. Jordan of Boston, who was made a defendant in a suit brought by the executor of the estate of the late Alfred W. Converse, has resulted in complications in connection with the Windsor Savings Bank from which, it was charged, Converse stole $180,000.

Miss Jordan formerly lived at No 326 Park street, Dorchester. The suit was brought against her to recover forty shares of stock valued at several thousand dollars which it was charged Converse had given to her. Converse died on January 16, last, from a bullet wound that he claimed he inflicted accidentally.

Converse's widow, from whom he had been separated for some time before he died, and others members of his family, live in Woburn. None of his relatives had ever heard of Miss Jordan.

15-INCH GUNS FOR BRITISH WARSHIPS

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Standard says that the 27,000-ton battleships for which the British government has just placed orders will carry eight fifteen-inch guns.

Treasurer Garcelon Denies Harvard Has 'Signed Up' Haughton

The story current that Percy Haughton had been reengaged as coach of the Harvard team at a much higher salary than previously paid was denied by W. F. Garcelon, graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, today. Said Mr. Garcelon:

"No action has been taken yet. It cannot be settled until the football committee takes action, which will not be for awhile yet.

"It is a good statement of the case to say that everybody knows that everybody wants him, and there is not much doubt what will be done.

"The official action, however, will not come off for awhile, and I happen to know that not a contract has been signed, nor a paper has passed.

"The sentiment, of course, is well known, and what will happen is not greatly in doubt."

REPORT SERVIA AND AUSTRIA IN CLASH OF ARMS

BULLETIN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 25.—The Austrian battleships here departed today for the Adriatic, all Austrian bluejackets and marines having been withdrawn from guard duty.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—A report that hostilities had already broken out between Austria and Servia caused a panic on the Bourse today. The report could not be traced to a definite source, but it caused frantic selling among stock traders, who accepted it as authentic.

Dispatches from Vienna, received this afternoon, say that a belief is current there that it will be impossible to maintain peace in Europe.

Five Austrian army corps have been mobilized and are equipped for war. It is reported that Austria will send an ultimatum to Belgrade within seventy-two hours unless there are counter developments in the meantime.

Week's Armistice Declared.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 25.—A week's armistice was today concluded by the Bulgarian and Turkish plenipotentiaries at Hodzhakoej.

An announcement to this effect was made by the Turkish government. There were no sounds of firing along the Tchataljа lines and all indications were that hostilities before this city have been suspended.

Turkey is believed to have been forced into an armistice by the sudden shift in the operations of the Balkan allies which threatened to take possession of the Dardanelles and by the savage inroads of cholera in the Turkish capital.

1ST DEGREE FOR ETTOR BARRED BY THE JUDGE

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Nov. 25.—Judge Quinn charged the jury today in the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, accused of being accessories in the killing of Annie Lo Pezzi in the January strike riot at Lawrence, and the case was then given to the consideration of the twelve men who will decide their fates.

The court declared that the jurors should under no circumstance find either Ettor or Giovannitti guilty of murder in the first degree, but he said that in the case of Caruso they might find him guilty of murder in the first degree or the second degree, or they might acquit him, according as to how they considered the evidence.

The Judge began his address at 9:40 a. m., immediately after court convened. The room was filled with interested spectators. The charge lasted one hour and five minutes.

The Court said:

We have arrived after several weeks of careful consideration of this most important case at the last stage but one in the determination or innocence of the three men who are on trial.

It is a short while you twelve men will be called on to decide as to the culpability or innocence of the three prisoners.

I am quite sure that having observed your conduct as you sat on this case, you are competent to, and will, pass on the momentous issues at stake without sympathy or prejudice, and that you will return a just verdict, in accordance with the evidence you have heard here.

The Judge's Charge.

The Court said:

It is a source of great comfort to me to know that each of the prisoners has been most ably defended.

In the final analysis of the testimony it is your knowledge and recollection of the evidence which will control and prevail.

The Commonwealth is tender of the interests of every defendant. It seeks no victims and it demands no sacrifice. It has a view only the protection of the individual citizens and to failure and solidness of the rights of the defendants as of those of any citizen.

A fair verdict against the prisoners conflicts with the purpose and the laws of the Commonwealth as effectively as a false verdict in their favor.

The State has no higher duty or interest than to preserve all its citi-

CHARGE JURY TAMPERING IN GIBSON TRIAL.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Charges that Henry Tweddle, juror No. 5, in the case of Burton W. Gibson, accused of the murder of his client, Mrs. Rosa Mangold Sachs, had been approached by agents hostile to the defense since the adjournment of court last Friday, were placed before Justice Tompkins before the trial was resumed here today.

THREE DROWNED IN HELL GATE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Three men whose names have not yet been learned were drowned in Hell Gate today when the motor boat in which they were sailing was run down by a New Haven railroad car lighter.

ACTOR HUDSON IS SUICIDE BY GAS

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Alfred Hudson, Jr., an actor, was found dead in bed in his father's home in West Forty-fifth street today. He had committed suicide by inhaling gas.

FIFTEEN INJURED IN MONTREAL CRASH

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—Fifteen persons were hurt in a collision between two street cars here today. The victims were cared for by nuns in a convent into which they were carried.

SAYS M'NAMARA WAS TO BLOW UP THE CANAL

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 25.—At the dynamite conspiracy trial here today, L. L. Jewell testified that Hockin told him on July 25, 1910, that J. J. McNamara planned, after the Los Angeles Times explosion, to blow up the Frick office building in Pittsburgh, thus murdering all the officers of the American Bridge Company.

"Hockin told me McNamara planned to blow up a Pullman sleeper just to murder Mary Dye, his secretary, whom he feared," said Jewell.

"Hockin also told me President Ryan knew nothing of the plans for wholesale murder. He said if this thing ever came to trial he would take his medicine with the bunch and perjure himself by saying he knew nothing of it."

McManigal said J. B. and J. J. McNamara told him at headquarters April 7, 1911, that they were going to blow up one of the locks on the Panama Canal, being constructed by the McClintic-Marshall Construction Company.

"They wanted to join the army and get down there and I told them I couldn't," said the witness.

"J. J. then said he was going to send four fellows out to Los Angeles and burn the town off the map, making it a landmark like San Francisco.

"We will blow up the main that gives the city its water supply, then we will set fire to a bunch of big buildings and burn her off the map," was the way McNamara put it. "I'm afraid the executive board is going back on me, but I'm going ahead with this work anyhow, and I've got to have funds," said J. J., according to McManigal.

LUCILLE CAMERON BAILED IN $10,000

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Miss Lucille Cameron, who had been held by the government under a $25,000 bond as a witness against Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight fighter, was given her liberty today under $10,000 bail.

CONGRESS MAY PROBE G. T. DEAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Members of Congress here intimate that an immediate congressional investigation will be ordered on the manner in which Theodore Roosevelt when President, and then President Taft, as disclosed by the AMERICAN, have openly violated the Sherman anti-trust law and juggled with other Federal statutes to enable the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad to monopolize the transportation of the New England States.

To President Taft the statement in the AMERICAN which included President Taft's letter to Norman H. White, were submitted, but no comeut was forthcoming. Neither did any of the officials of the law department of the government make any statement. It was learned that the attitude of the President is that all necessary to be said on the matter has been said.

A Department of Justice official discussed the case with some heat. He said:

The proceeding against the New Haven and Grand Trunk railroads has not been stopped and will not be. We told you last week that the Federal investigation was stopped in order that we might thoroughly investigate the matter and that we intended to enforce the law.

His position made it plain that congressional action will be absolutely necessary to have the real purposes of the Department of Justice made public.

The effect of action by Congress would be to call upon Attorney-General Wickersham to announce definitely whether any prosecution by the government for violations of the law by the New Haven road was to follow the "investigation," which Mr. Wickersham says is being made by direction of the Department of Justice.

Possibly no action could be taken by Congress directing such a prosecution because such a bill or resolution would have to pass the Senate as well as the House and receive the approval of President Taft. The recourse left to the House should it find a violation of the law and wilful refusal by Attorney General Wickersham to order prosecution or to block efforts to prosecute will be through impeachment proceedings.

Chairman Robert L. Henry, of the House Committee on Rules, said:

The story in the AMERICAN is very interesting. I cannot, however, discuss what action may be taken by the House, or what should be taken, because the question may come before the committee on rules, where I shall be called to pass on it.

JUDGE'S CHARGE TO ETTOR JURY

If, on the other hand, the guilt of the prisoner has been shown, a verdict of acquittal would not only be a violation of your oaths, but would inflict a grievous wrong on the Commonwealth.

If a true verdict calls for conviction, the misfortune for the prisoner is not in the verdict nor in the penalty, but in the fact that it was his conduct which makes the verdict true. The Court then took some time in a discussion of the question of reasonable doubt.

"Reasonable Doubt."

As to the question of reasonable doubt, it has been held by our highest courts that through the distinguished jurice whose opinion stands our wall (Justice Lemuel Shaw) that proof of the guilt of the charges preferred must be shown beyond any reasonable doubt.

It is possible to defeat the administration of justice and paralyze judicial proceedings for the punishment of crime through exaggerating the force of the phrase "beyond reasonable doubt."

It is unquestionably the right of laborers to leave their employment when they so desire, whether dissatisfied or not, and for them to use peaceful persuasion and argument to persuade others to join their ranks. But the use of force, or violation or intimidation is not permitted.

Every man has the right to work for whom he pleases, and for any sum he thinks proper. And none has the right to prevent him against his wish from so doing. If stress requires as a condition of success, the violation of personal liberties, then strikes stand condemned.

Here followed a discussion of what constitutes peaceful picketing.

Considering the cases of Ettor and Giovannitti, separately, the court said:

It is not the personal views of the defendants, no matter how much we may approve or disapprove of them, that are on trial here. The sole question here is: Did they incite to violence and unlawful conduct that brought about the untimely death of Annie Lo Pezzi?

There is no question about the right of public meetings. The right of public discussion is unlimited, with the exception, of course, that it must not be used for the purpose of inciting to a breach of peace or to violence to personal property.

Liberty and Law.

Liberty is obedience to law.

Was there any mischievous advice given at any time?

You should consider the language used; the state of mind of the audience and say whether or not under all the circumstances the defendants were honest and preaching nothing against peace and good order.

Or whether they, or either of them, wickedly intended to effect a breach of the peace and to incite to violence, to bring the laws of the country into contempt and to lead their followers to despise and to scout the authority of the officers of the law.

He who addresses a large audience of poor people, out of employment and discouraged and perhaps hungry, will not want hearers ready to believe and to follow.

In arriving at your conclusion you may consider the matter of dynamite alluded to, whether or not the strikers believed that the mill owners had dynamite planted to injure their cause; and you may consider the effect that the feeling would have on the already discouraged minds of the working people; and whether or not the feeling was all sufficient to produce the result alluded to by the government. But this trial is between the Commonwealth and the defendants only. And if others did wrong there is another time and occasion to deal with that.

Socialism Not an Issue.

That is no issue in this case.

You may consider the pamphlets referred to in testimony. Did they in any degree incite to violence by one people to acts of personal violence? Were they distributed with the approval or direction or at the suggestion of Ettor and Giovannitti, or anyone acting in their behalf? If not, you should disregard them to this respect.

The fact, if you so find, that the defendant Ettor or Giovannitti are unbelievers of Socialists is of no importance or materiality in itself. And the fact, if it is a fact, that Scopto has run away, must not be regarded by you as in any sense affecting the question of the guilt of the defendants, or any one of them.

Now, as to the verdict which may be returned. Against the defendant Caruso you may return a verdict of not guilty or of guilty of murder in the first degree, guilty of murder in the second degree. You are to determine the degree in accordance with the instructions I have given you.

As to the defendants Ettor and Giovannitti, I instruct you that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant you in finding that the defendants Ettor and Giovannitti participated in any specific attempt to kill, having the elements of murder in the first degree, and therefore, they, or either of them, or not to be found guilty of murder in the first degree.

Verdicts against them, or either of them, may be either not guilty or guilty of murder in the second degree, guilty of murder in the first degree, guilty of manslaughter, or not guilty.

A REAL DYNAMITER

This is a photograph of the maniac who threatened to blow up the central police station in Los Angeles. He holds in his lap a bomb of 60 sticks of dynamite, and is wearing a mask.

Here is one of the most remarkable newspaper photographs ever taken. It was made by Staff Photographer Spencer, of the Los Angeles Examiner. It shows Carl Reidelbach, alias Carl Warr, alias Albert Henry Davis, sitting at bay in the Los Angeles central police station on the morning of November 19. On Reidelbach's lap is an infernal machine loaded with sixty sticks of 80 per cent. giant powder, or enough to blow up an entire city block.

Reidelbach's left hand, inserted through the hold in the bomb, is on the trigger of the machine, and he is threatening to explode it if any one interferes with him.

Reidelbach's right hand is painted a bright red, and he is wearing a strange black mask, or head covering, with green goggle eyepieces, which he used to conceal his identity.

The photographer entered the room where Reidelbach was sitting, and at the risk of his life made this photograph.

When Reidelbach appeared at the Central Police Station everybody fled, leaving the dynamiter in full possession. For nearly two hours he held the station, blocking traffic and putting the police to their wit's end to devise some plan to capture him before he could set off his deadly machine.

Fearing the worst, Chief of Police Sebastian roped off the streets in the vicinity of the Central Station, and was removing the prisoners from the jail when Reidelbach was overpowered through a ruse worked by Detectives Hosick and Brown.

Brown engaged the dynamiter in conversation, when Hosick suddenly dashed at him and knocked the man unconscious, but not before Reidelbach had set off the mechanism of the bomb.

Hosick and Brown then ran to the street, with the box, torn it to pieces, scattered the dynamite sticks and extinguished the burning fuse without injury to any one.

SAMUEL GOMPERS IS SERIOUSLY ILL

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L., is seriously ill at Hotel Seneca here, and is threatened with pneumonia. President Gompers was expected to address the delegates to the Building Trades Department convention today, but was unable to appear.

NO 'NEW BIBLE' SAYS DR. MYERS

Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, when seen today denied that there was any new Baptist Bible.

"What is this that the newspapers have been saying about a new Baptist Bible?" asked Dr. Myers. "It advertised that it had advanced sheets of a Baptist Bible. Why, the New Testament of that so-called Bible has been out twenty-five years.

"This Bible is merely a commentary upon the whole Bible and not a separate Bible. There are many archaic expressions and much phraseology in the Bible that needs to be understood better and so the Baptist Church put forth a commentary on the Bible which is wrongly called a new Baptist Bible."

Rev. A. K. Foster, pastor of the First Baptist church, Worcester, is one of the best Biblical scholars in the United States, today ridiculed the report that there was a new Baptist Bible.

"It is simply an explanation of the Bible that the Baptist Publication Society of our church has put forth," said Dr. Foster.

"WE'LL ABIDE BY DECISION," SAYS ENGINEERS' HEAD

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Commenting upon the decision of the board of arbitration, which made its report public yesterday, Grand Chief Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which body has a membership of 32,000 men and is in operation upon fifty-two roads, today said:

"I am satisfied with the decision. It means that the demands of the men in the majority of instances have been met and that all will be benefited. We consented to adopt arbitration, and there is nothing else for us to do. There is no likelihood of a strike.

Representatives of the unions upon the affected railroads are meeting in Buffalo today.

"CASCARETS" FOR SICK HEADACHE

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember, that most disorders of the stomach, liver and intestines can be quickly cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

Weds Chauffeur Second Time

First Thought Him Employer

CHAUFFEUR BOEHM AND CHICAGO SOCIETY BRIDE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Aimee Givins "Kirkman," who married a chauffeur at 2 a. m. one day last week, thinking him to be his employer, a millionaire, and who spent several days regretting the step, has changed her mind and remarried the chauffeur, William Boehm, as a chauffeur. The second wedding of the former wife of a Chicago clubman has just taken place at Crown Point, Ind.

The young woman, who was the divorced wife of Robert S. Givins, prominent in business, married a man who said his name was Edward B. Kirkman. She says he represented that he was the son of Marshall N. Kirkman, former vice-president of the Northwestern Railroad.

It is believed Boehm got the idea of masquerading from a recent fiction story that told how a chauffeur pretended to be his employer and almost won a girl before she found out who he was. In the fiction story the girl married the employer of the chauffeur. Then she and her husband took a long ride, with the faker as their chauffeur, over the routes that the faker had taken her while trying to win her.

Eloped to Indiana.

A man claiming to be Edward B. Kirkman, son of M. M. Kirkman, former vice-president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, and Mrs. Aimee Givins, divorced wife of Robert S. Givins, son of a millionaire real estate dealer, were married following an elopement to Crown Point, Ind. It was a romantic story they told at the Alexandria Hotel.

BUT—

Marshall M. Kirkman denies the story; he has no son Edward. William Bruce Kirkman, one of his married sons, saw a picture of his supposed brother, the bridegroom.

Then it came out.

The man was William Boehm, who was chauffeur for Marshall M. Kirkman in Evanston and who was dismissed when the Kirkman car was put up for the Winter. Marshall Jay Kirkman, another married son, verified this.

NEXT—

Manager Weinberg of a South Side garage also identifies the picture of the supposed Kirkman as that of Boehm, the Kirkman chauffeur, and said he heard that Boehm was carrying a great roll of money.

AND THEN—

A man claiming to be Charles Hatch Linden of Sixty-third and Halsted streets came to the fore with the declaration that the two people claiming to be the Kirkmans, were at a well-known South Side cafe in Cottage Grove avenue, near Thirty-fifth street, where he recognized the man as a former chauffeur of the Kirkmans; that the couple quarreled early in the morning; that the man ordered a taxi of the People's garage at Fifty-fifth street and Calumet avenue, rode to the Englewood depot and boarded a train for Danville, Ill., having displayed a large roll of bills.

HAWTHORNE AND QUINCY ON TRIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Julian Hawthorne, son of the famous novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and three associates, who, as alleged by the Government, participated in a $3,000,000 swindling deal, were placed on trial before Judge Hough today in the United States District Court.

The three associates of Hawthorne placed on trial with him today are Josiah Quincy, former Mayor of Boston and at present a member of the Boston Transit Commission; Albert Freedman, a widely known promoter of mining properties, and Dr. William J. Morton, a well known nerve specialist.

Among attorneys appearing for the defendants are Damon E. Hall, N. E. Jones and Thomas W. Proctor of Boston, who were granted special permission by the court to appear, and Joseph H. Choate, Jr., and Roderick Wellman of this city. A jury was secured and postoffice inspectors who conducted the investigation and made the raid on the mining properties of the defendants were among the first witnesses.

During the examination of talesmen it was seen that the defence of the promoters would be that they had no inkling at the time they sent out their circulars that the mining properties were anything but what they represented them to be, that it was only recently they learned they did not possess the hidden wealth attributed to them and that they stood ready at this time to pay back every cent turned into their coffers by one million or more investors.

The mining properties promoted by Hawthorne and his associates were the Hawthorne Silver & Iron Mining Company, the Temagami-Cobalt Mines Company, the Elk-Lake-Cobalt Mines Company, Ltd., and the Montreal-James Mines Company, Ltd.

OPEN FOURTH OPERA YEAR TONIGHT WITH 'TALES OF HOFFMANN'

Opera opens its fourth season in Boston tonight with Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," sung in French, with Edmund Clement in the role of Hoffmann. Andre Caplet will be the director.

The costumes have been carefully designed and new scenery constructed under the personal direction of Josef Urban, stage director of the opera house. The score, also, has been edited and revised by Mr. Russell and Mr. Caplet.

It is expected that this opening night will be the most brilliant in the history of the opera house, with every box occupied. The cast:

ROADS TO REPORT ON FREIGHT CARS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—To prevent a shortage in freight cars, the Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered all railroads to forward to the commission not later than December 10 a statement showing the location of freight cars and their ownership. After December 10 railroads will be required to furnish a semi-monthly report of the location of freight cars.

MRS. TAFT LEARNS HOW TO PLAY GOLF

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The sport-loving members of Washington's "400" were gratified to learn today that Mrs. Taft has taken up golfing. While only a beginner, she shows considerable form. President Taft, witnessing her playing, laughingly made the prophecy that if he were not careful she would be able to beat him soon.

FIREBUG SETS 3D LOWELL CHURCH

LOWELL, Nov. 25.—Every pastor in Lowell was today notified by the police that a mob, believed to be insane, is attempting to set fire to churches throughout the city.

The action was taken as a result of an incendiary fire in St. Peter's Church on Gorham street, now being investigated by the police.

Incendiary fires have damaged two churches in Lowell within a month. St. Peter's is the third to suffer.

All the fires were discovered in rooms in rear of the altars. In the Lithuanian Church, on Rogers street, November 2, and in St. Jean Baptiste Church last Thursday the fires had gained such headway that great damage was done before they were controlled.

The room in the rear of the altar in St. Peter's Church, where the fire was discovered, is used for the storage of oil used in the sanctuary lamp and for remnants of candles which have been used on the altar.

Miss Rosella O'Hare, who has charge of the altars in the church, told the police and Sra officials that when she left the church she turned off the electric light. Nothing was left, she said, by which the fire could be started.

Morgan's Ivories Exhibit Near an End.

LONDON—The Board of Education announce that the collection of ivories exhibited on loan at the Victoria and Albert Museum, Kensington, by J. Pierpont Morgan, will be withdrawn at the beginning of December.

LONDON—William Flavelle Moneypenny, a well-known journalist, is dead of lung trouble, aged forty-six. For eight years he had been engaged in the compilation of an authorized life of Lord Beaconsfield. Only ten days ago the second volume of the work appeared.

BORDEAUX—Albert Spalding, the American violinist, appeared as a soloist with the orchestra of St. Cecilia at the opening concert of the season. He received a great ovation. Mr. Spalding is the first American ever invited by this orchestra to play as a soloist.

LONDON—Sir Edward Moss, chairman of the biggest vaudeville combine in Great Britain, died here today.

MILAN.—Antonio Andreazza, a peasant cousin of the Pope, had his pocket picked in a street car here today of $2,000 in cash and checks and several important papers.

ST. PETERSBURG—For two days snow has fallen abundantly and there is also sleighing.

POLES VANQUISHED IN WARREN BATTLE

WARREN, Nov. 25.—Judge Hamblin's court looked like a Turkish and Bulgarian battlefield today when several wounded men were arraigned and complaints made against them by cut, bruised and scratched policemen. The wounded contingent consisted of what the police could gather of about sixty men of Polish birth who fought five policemen for about an hour at a dance at American Hall. Jealousy between two young men, who fought it out, started the mêlée. A search was made today for several roosters and hens that were to be raffled off for Thanksgiving.

SWAMP ROOT. is not recommended for everything; but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. At druggists in fifty cent and dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it.

You Wouldn't Eat Dried Apples if a Juicy Pippin Were Handy!

Then why should you fill your pipe with chopped-up, dried-out tobacco, that cannot keep fresh in a tin can, when you can cut your tobacco fresh from the plug and get a sweeter, cooler, more fragrant smoke.

Plug Tobacco means fresh tobacco, because all the natural moisture of the leaf and the genuine tobacco flavor have been pressed into the plug and kept there by a natural leaf wrapper—Nature's own protection.

Tobacco packed in tin cans or cloth bags burns fast—smokes hot— and bites your tongue. Fresh, sweet, Master Workman Plug Tobacco burns slow and smokes cool—Can't bite your tongue.

If you have been smoking dried-out granulated tobaccos—the cool, slow burning, fragrant plug of Master Workman will be a revelation to you. Try it today.

First Snowfall of Season in Boston Whitens the Air

There was a touch of turkey, mince pie and Thanksgiving in the air today. It came in the flutter of snowflakes that whitened the sky in the latter part of the forenoon. It was Boston's first snow of the season, although there had been a teensy, weensy fall in Greater Boston earlier.

"It's the first snow we've got any account of," said the Boston Weather Man. "There will probably be small flurries this afternoon and tonight. It will be colder tonight and clear and colder tomorrow."

The flakes that fell today hardly lived until they struck the sidewalk. Just when boys and girls began to dream of bobsleds, Old Sol peeped out from behind a dark cloud with such a warm smile that the flying crystals vanished.

WOMAN IS FOUND DEAD IN DOORWAY

The body of an unidentified woman, about sixty, was found lying in the doorway at No. 7, Worcester street, South End, today. Dr. John W. Johnson of No. 29 Worcester street, pronounced the woman dead and ordered the body taken to the City Hospital for examination. In a pocket was found a pawn ticket bearing the name of Agnes Reardon, No. 139 West Concord street. The police were told no one there knew a woman of that name. The description follows: Height, 5 feet 5 inches, 120 pounds, complexion light, gray hair, blue eyes, black coat and skirt, checked petticoat, gray sweater and black shoes and stockings.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK GRAND TRUNK FLYER

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 25.—An attempt was made, to wreck the International Limited, the fastest train on the Grand Trunk east of here today. A chain was placed in the frog, but an extra freight was sent out before the arrival of the limited from Chicago was due at the spot where the frog had been crippled. The limited carried several hundred passengers.

NEW YORK TO KEEP MORGAN TREASURES

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Borough President McAneny today announced that New York Borough would appropriate the $750,000 necessary for a new wing to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, while will enable the edifice to house J. Pierpont Morgan's $30,000,000 art collection.

MALONE SUGGESTED FOR U. S. ATTORNEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Dudley Field Malone, son-in-law of Senator O'Gorman, and George Gordon Battle are being frequently mentioned as possible successors to Henry A. Wise, United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, whose term of office expires next April.

ANOTHER WRECK ON NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 25.—Traffic on all lines of the New Haven road east and west of here was interfered with today when a switch engine sideswiped a freight train which way backing down toward the passenger station near the west end of the local railroad cut.

The locomotive and two freight cars were derailed and damaged and several tracks blocked. Engineer John Murray of the switcher sustained a broken ankle. Two wreckers were put to work to clear the tracks and did so after several hours' work.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Thousands of commuters on the New Haven road were from a half to three-quarters of an hour late today because of the breaking of an electric wire at Harrison, New York. The train was No. 177 running from Stamford to the Grand Central, and making all stops. The breaking of the wire tied up the local incoming track, making it necessary to shift the locals to the express tracks. This delayed the express trains as well as the others, making the confusion complete.

The blowing out of the cylinder head on an engine attached to an inward bound train of the Boston & Maine, just north of the Melrose Highlands station at 7:30 a. m. today, tied up inward bound traffic for an hour and a half.

WELLESLEY GIRLS ENTERTAIN MEN IN SORORITY HOUSES

Several Wellesley sorority houses were opened to young men guests of college girls Sunday evening, as further experiment in a new plan of "organized entertainment" for Sunday evening visitors to Wellesley.

By senior and junior girls, who are permitted to entertain guests in two fraternity houses each Sunday evening, the innovation is enthusiastically indorsed. By the faculty it was declared the new plan is believed a success.

Thousands of Men Profiting by the Extraordinary Price Reductions Throughout My Million Dollar Stock

Special Notice About Blanket Back Overcoats

A number of men who wanted Blanket Back Overcoats were disappointed Saturday. Two hundred new models arrived late Saturday afternoon and went on the racks today. Georges clever styles, combination box and belted backs—grays, blues and browns, satin yoke—warmth without weight. Intended them to bring $25. Now

$15

SINCE the day I came out with my first announcement that Mr. Georges, Sr., was to retire, and that I as junior partner had decisively reduced prices throughout my Million Dollar Stock to turn it into cash quickly, I've enjoyed the greatest selling in the history of the Georges business. I deserve it. I'm offering bigger clothes values now in November than you've ever before been offered in January or February. And the tremendous response day after day only goes to show that the public appreciates values.

These are the Reductions Throughout the Stock

$15, $18 & $20 Suits & Overcoats	Now	$10
$20, $22.50 & $25 Suits & Overcoats	Now	$12

Romantic Flavor to Ramsayite Editor's Question This Week

Suppose, gentle reader, that you have just arrived in Paris for the first time, innocent of all knowledge of French language and customs, but with a thirst to learn.

At supper in the "pension" that night, where your friend from the Latin quarter has taken you, you see a young lady of charming Parisian vivacity and beauty.

Being of a susceptible and ardent temperament, some such sentiment as the following gushes to your lips:

Even if I cannot talk, I want you to know that I'm hookey-pookey about you! Will you sit with me at midnight?

But you speak no French. The girl, clearly, does not speak English.

What are you to do?

Sir William Ramsay says, write her a sign letter.

Why don't you try it, even if you aren't in Paris? The AMERICAN will pay $1 each for the five best sign letters sent in this week, concerning the above sentiment. Send your offerings to the Ramsayite Editor.

Women in Crete Wore Hobble Skirt 5,000 Years Ago

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—The hobble skirt is not so new, after all. It was in fashion 5,000 years ago along with corsets and manolin culottes, according to Dr. Edith N. Hall, who has charge of the excavations in Crete for the University of Pennsylvania and who is here to deliver a course of lectures on the work. Excavations show this to be true, she says.

She also declares that ancient Crete had reached a very high place of civilization. The city had a drainage system which compares favorably with any present-day drainage systems.

"Excavation on the island," said Dr. Hall, "will be materially assisted by the Balkan War, since, under the Turkish regime, the excavating is hampered by a great deal of red tape."

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Transcontinental touring never was so popular as it has been the past season. No less than twenty individual motorists have journeyed by automobile from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast and one trip was accomplished by a motor truck. According to S. K. Hindes of Los Angeles, who just completed a 4,100 mile trip from the Pacific coast and who is now in New York, 1913 will see even more trips of this character made by private owners of cars.

Numerous touring information bureaus and various automobile clubs along any one of the several possible routes have obtained information regarding roads and by consulting the secretaries of these organizations, from point to point, the motorist can find out just what to take in order to avoid the bad or impassable sections. Mr. Hindes, accompanied by his wife, left Los Angeles late in September and completed the trip in twenty-five days. About every possible condition of road was encountered.

* * *

F. W. Kurtz, who has just concluded his work with the General Motors Company, having been the director of advertising since May, 1911, and having perfected an organization whereby each subsidiary company now has its own efficient advertising department, will return December 1 to Philadelphia to resume his connection with N. W. Ayer & Son.

* * *

The Olympia auto show in London was singularly free from startling changes. It was a show of detailed refinements and general improvements, of undoubted progress, but of progress not well defined lines. Entirely new models were rare; for the most part the cars at the show were modifications of those of a year ago, the modification mostly tending towards accessibility, ease of dismounting, general simplification and silent operation. Where there were new models they were generally smaller rather than larger than the previously existing types of cars on the market. Europe seems to like the small cars.

URGE CLARK'S SON AS PARLIAMENTARIAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Friends of Speaker Champ Clark declare they will urge upon the Democrats the selection of Bennett Clark, the twenty-four-year-old son of the Speaker, as parliamentarian of the House of the Sixty-third Congress.

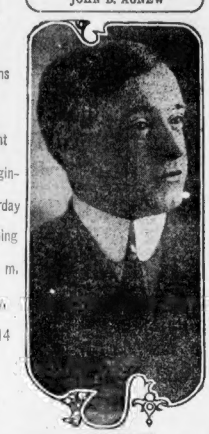
Oppo[illegible]ity in Big Contest

Largest Special Offer Open

JOHN B. AGNEW



Subscriptions in blocks of ten count double, beginning yesterday and continuing up to 10 p. m. on Saturday, December 14

John B. Agnew of Arctic, R. I., is making a warm fight to stay up among the leaders

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Dont delay!

Any candidate in the AMERICAN'S $40,000 contest who loses a single moment in the next three Opportunity Weeks ought to be put in an asylum.

All you candidates read the big Opportunity Weeks announcement yesterday. Today is the first business day, following that extraordinary chance to get two-for-one for your work.

Subscriptions in blocks of ten count double for three weeks, beginning yesterday and continuing up to 10 P. M. Saturday, December 14.

Not only is this a great opportunity, but it is positively the biggest chance of its kind there will be in the whole Contest. Remember the guarantee which the Contest Editor printed with the announcement of the Opportunity Weeks.

That guarantee stated explicitly that "this is the largest special offer which will be made during the competition." That's right. The Contest Editor means just what he says. It's a case of "positively one and only appearance of Mr. Two-for-One Opportunity Weeks," as they would bill it in vaudeville.

Under such circumstances a deaf, dumb and blind man, living at the bottom of a dark cell in the middle of the Sahara desert, with his hands and feet tied and starving to death, and with everybody in the country moved away for good would scramble around somehow and get a block of ten subscriptions, if only for the sake of showing he knew a good thing when it was handed to him.

So, you, Mr. Candidate, are you dead or alive, de-funct or de-lighted?

The next three weeks will have a great deal to do with the final result of the whole contest. Make a note of that.

When subscriptions count double, then the fire comes to work.

The Contest Editor desires to call your attention, ladies and gentlemen, to one John B. Agnew of Arctic, R. I.

Mr. Agnew is winner of the $150 third cash prize in the special offer for those turning in the most subscription votes from October 8 to November 18.

Mr. Agnew is topped now by only three other candidates in the whole contest field.

Mr. Agnew lives in Arctic, R. I., a small town with a cold name but apparently a red-hot place for a contest candidate.

Some candidates wail: "Oh, if I only lived in Boston or Providence or Worcester or some such big city, I'd show 'em. But I can't do anything in my town; it's too small."

But how about Brother Agnew of Arctic, R. I., who beats Providence candidates, even, with all their congested territory to pull from.

Neither does Mr. Agnew have a lot of lodge or society brethren to boost his game because he doesn't belong to them, so far as known. The way Mr. Agnew gets ahead, wins $150 cash specials and so on, is by eternally hustling.

Talk about making the most of your chances. Agnew makes more of his chances than there is in them.

MORAL—Get out and do as Agnew does and do it right now in the Opportunity period.

Greatest Disturber of Peace—Drunkenness

Why Tolerate It? Banish It From Your Home For Good. Follow These Directions.

Not a day need be lost—you don't have to wait for the next spree—or even the next pay day—begin now and have peace and happiness in the family and rid your home of the demon drink!

Do this—go to Riker-Jaynes' and get a package of Renova; put a little of it in his tea or coffee; follow directions faithfully; it is tasteless and absolutely harmless and he won't know he's taking the cure. But after a while he'll be wondering why he no longer cares for the stuff and you will bless Renova all your days—so will he—if you ever tell him. Begin now. Every day counts.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a whole package, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 204 Broadway, and proofs of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

No Beauty Secrets, Says Miss Heming

Young English Star, Now in Boston, Says That Health Rules Are the Only Ones to Follow.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

I didn't in the least mean to ask Violet Heming, the wonderful little English girl playing in "Disraeli" at the Plymouth Theatre, her beauty secrets. In fact, I had my head full of wonderful, and, best of all, original questions which I was going to ask her, but at the moment I saw her —bing! went all of those ideas, and I just had to exclaim in breathless amazement: "How do you do it?"

"Do what?" queried this irresistible bit of femininity with the pretty blonde curls, the large blue eyes, and the clear skin showing not a sign of a wrinkle or crowsfoot, and just the loveliest accent and the most graciously charming manners, as she held my hand while I continued to gaze.

It was a foolish question. First, because she's only eighteen and doesn't need the aid of any beauty secrets, and secondly because if a woman really and truly has a beauty secret that's the one secret she's going to keep. If she didn't, why we'd all be beautiful.

"Oh, no," she laughed derisively, "I wish my mother could hear you ask me that. She scolds me terribly because I sometimes won't even wash my face nights before I tumble into bed, let alone use creams and lotions. She says I'm a regular little pig."

And at that she giggled such a delightful girly-girl giggle that all who heard her joined in the chorus. Perhaps it was because she looked so like anything else in the world but a pig.

"But you know I'm terribly tired when night comes," she added by way of apology for her piggishness—and the apology was at once accepted.

Usually the beautiful women we see floating about on the stage are anything but beautiful when one sees them in their dressing rooms that no wonder I was surprised to find pretty little Miss Heming even more beautiful than on the stage—so beautiful in fact that I've been raving about her ever since and saying to myself, "What's the use?"

But she prattled on while I was gradually but surely—well I came to, just as she was saying: "I walk ten miles every day. Cool water, air and sunshine are my only health secrets. I haven't any beauty ones. But if you have health secrets I don't believe you need beauty ones, do you? But let's talk about the play, don't you think it the sweetest thing ever? I just love my part. I always did want to be lady somebody and so perhaps that's why I like my part so well.

"I think girls are terribly foolish to spend their good money in dramatic schools when the practical experience is really just what they need," she went on effusively.

MISS VIOLET HEMING

"If they go on the stage, no matter how small a part they play, they have the very best examples before them all the time. It's good practical experience that teaches them every time. I should think every girl who has inclinations that way should be allowed to go on the stage very young."

"Do you think the stage holds many dangers for girls?" I inquired.

"Indeed, no. It depends entirely upon the girl, as every condition in life depends on the girl. There are a great many hardships, but she will find those everywhere."

"Have you met with any hardships or troubles?" I queried, wondering to hear one so young and one so apparently care-free talking so knowingly of what it seemed must be most foreign to her.

"Yes, and I'll tell you, but not for publication"—and she did tell me, and don't you wish you knew?

"I think though," she said later on, "that the stage is the easiest and safest life for a woman who must earn her own living. Of course, I know nothing of musical comedy, but I know that I am as safe and as well protected here as I would be in my own home. I love the stage and feel as much at home there as in my own bedroom."

"What do you consider the most important element in success?"

"The keynote of success is personality," she answered decisively.

"And personality?" I wanted to find out this clever little lady's definition of personality.

"Well, really," she replied in her pretty English accent, "you can't define it, can you? It 's something we're born with and it can't be acquired. It's an elusive something which you really can't define."

MRS. RAYMOND ON STAND TODAY

few minutes I went out to the orchard.

Q.—What did you wear? A.—My wrapper, light apron, short jacket and black skirt.

Q.—What stairs did you use? A.—The back stairs.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I went into the orchard and sat on a log or rock under an apple tree.

Q.—Could you tell the exact location of that tree? A.—I don't think I could.

Q.—How many trees in the corner where you sat? A.—Three or four.

Thought Bert Was Stranger.

Q.—What did you do in the barn of the Elmwood Hotel? A.—I saw Mr. Mattox water his horses.

Q.—How long had you been there when that occurred? A.—Twenty minutes.

Q.—What else did you see? A.—I saw Caroll Hopkins drive into the yard. I also saw the cook, Mrs. Simmons, in the yard.

Q.—What else did you see? A.—I saw a woman walk across a field toward the church.

Q.—Did you change your seat under the tree? A.—I think not.

Q.—Did you see Bert that night? A.—I think I saw Bert cross the orchard.

Q.—Did you try to let him know where you were? A.—I thought that if I fretted him he would appreciate me more.

Q.—What occurred then? A.—I got cold when it became late and I started to go into the house. I went around the house and saw Bert on the sidewalk. He wore a long coat. I never saw him wear it before. I thought he was a stranger and I went back to the woodshed.

Q.—Did Bert follow you? A.—Yes, and we went upstairs together.

Q.—Did he help you? A.—No, he just took my arm and walked with me.

Q.—Were you sobbing? A.—No.

Q.—Did you, Mrs. Raymond, on the night of the murder, go up the Nickerson Hill road? A.—No.

Mrs. Raymond spoke clearly and gave much emphasis to her answer.

Q.—Did you know Mattie Hackett? A.—Casually.

A.—Where did you meet her? A.—In a corn factory.

Q.—Was there any feeling of jealousy in your heart of Mattie Hackett? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever have any cause to have ill feeling toward her? I mean from the conduct of your husband toward Mattie? A.—No.

Q.—On the night Bert took Ethel and Mattie home did you notice anything wrong in Bert's conduct? A.—Certainly not. I walked along the road until Bert came back.

Q.—Were you strong enough to walk up the Nickerson Hill road? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Did you see Bert trying to hug Ethel Hackett when he drove her back to the hotel? A.—I did not.

Q.—You got into the carriage? A.—Yes, everything was all pleasant.

Q.—When was this? A.—Two days before the murder.

Q.—When did you see Mattie Hackett again? A.—Never again.

Mrs. Raymond stod erect. Her hands were clasped and rested on the witness stand.

Q.—Did you ever tell Mrs. Swan that you would kill Mattie Hackett? A.—I certainly did not.

Q.—What was your feeling toward Mrs. Swan? A.—I never cared for her. She was old, had been married four times and always wanted to tell me about herself.

Q.—Did you ever tie a bowline or a square knot? Did you ever have to tie knots that you have seen in the cord used to kill Mattie Hackett? A.—No, sir, never. I know nothing about knots.

Q.—What was your weight in 1905? A.—When I was married I weighed 125 pounds.

Q.—Did you wear tan shoes a week before the murder? A.—No, they were not fit to wear.

Under Cross-Examination.

Attorney General Pattangall began his cross-examination at this point.

Q.—When were the shoes burned? A.—About a week before the murder.

Q.—Do you remember Mr. Conners calling on you and talking about the murder. "Yes."

Q.—Was your husband present? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Conners that you weighed 140 pounds? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—What is your height? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Conners you were five feet five inches tall? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did Gertrude Raymond call on you a few days after the murder? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long did she stay? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Where did she go when she left your house? A.—To her grandmother's.

Q.—Do you remember about going to meet your husband at the dead stream two days before the murder? A.—Don't remember.

Q.—Where have you worked since the murder? A.—At Rockland two Summers ago.

Q.—How long were there? A.—I don't remember, a few months.

Q.—Live any where else? A.—Yes, at East Oxford; we were there three or four years ago.

Q.—And where else? A.—In Poland and Turner.

Q.—What width were the tan shoes? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Where did you buy the black shoes? A.—I think I bought them at Bert Leighton's. I am not sure.

Q.—What size were they? A.—4½.

Saw Woman in Field.

Q.—Do you remember telling Mr. Peacock how you were dressed on the night of the murder. A.—I don't remember.

Q.—When you sat out in the Summer, didn't you usually sit on the doorsteps? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you ever remember sitting out in the orchard other than on that one night? A.—I don't think I do.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Peacock that you often sat out under the trees? A.—I cannot remember.

Q.—You know whether you did sit out there frequently? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—While you were sitting under the trees, you saw a woman cross the field? A.—Yes.

Q.—Describe her, and tell where she went. A.—She walked toward the church.

Q.—How near were you to her? A.—Perhaps thirty or forty feet.

Q.—Did you know her? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—Was it possible for this woman to see you? A.—I think so.

Q.—Did you try to find out who that woman was? A.—No, I never did.

Mrs. Raymond retained her self-composure and not once became ruffled by the questions of the Attorney-General.

Q.—The point where Mr. Sedgeley said he saw a woman sitting was not the point where you were sitting? A.—No, it was not.

Q.—You knew that you were suspected, and of course you made efforts to ascertain whether any persons saw you in the orchard? A.—I don't remember of doing anything like that.

Q.—While you were seated in the orchard you say you saw Hopkins, Sedgeley, Bert, Mattox and others. Didn't you ask them if they had seen you? A.—I don't remember of that.

Q.—Mrs. Dwelley was the only person who saw you from the time your husband left you until you returned to the house, but you don't know when you learned that fact. A.—I don't. I remember that I talked with her about it, but don't remember just when it was.

QUIT CALOMEL!

Thousands Are Turning from This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver toner in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers.

His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a litle sugar-coated, olive-oil colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They oil the bowels, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities. 10c and 25c per box.

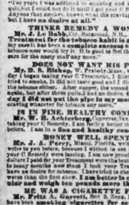
How to Completely Overcome TOBACCO HABIT



Attained at Last—A Successful Remedy.

Read These Testimonials. They are but a Few from Legions.

VICTORY IN 3 DAYS

DOES NOT CRAVE FOR TOBACCO.
Mrs. C. J. Davis, 707 E. Fort Ave., Baltimore, writes: "I can truly say that my husband is like a new man and does not crave for tobacco; he has not used any since taking your treatment.

FEELS BETTER EVERY WAY.
Mr. Wm. Seitz, Elden, Iowa, writes: "I took your C Remedies and have been greatly benefited by it. I have no desire for chewing tobacco and feel better in every way. My food tastes better, I sleep better and your remedies have certainly done all that you claim for them. It was more than worth the money for I cannot express in words the good your remedies have done me."

COULD NOT QUIT SMOKING BEFORE.
Mr. William Bearden, R.F.D. 4, Vienna, ave., writes: "For years I was addicted to smoking and knew I ought to quit, but I could not do it until I got your C Set of Remedies. Anyone that smokes, knows what the craving for tobacco is, but I have no desire at all."

THINKS REMEDY A WONDER.
Mr. J. Le Babb, Ctr. Barnstead, N.H., writes: "Your Treatment for the tobacco habit is a wonder. In my case it has been a complete success and I wish every tobacco-user would try it. It is good to feel that one does not care for the nasty stuff any more."

DOES NOT WANT HIS PIPE.
Mr. D. S. Bishop, W. Peabody, Mass., writes: "On the day I began taking your C Treatment, I filled my pipe and tried to smoke. It did not taste good and I did not crave for the tobacco either. After supper, the second day, I tried it again, but after three puffs, I had no desire. On the third day I did not put the pipe in my mouth. I have no craving whatever for tobacco any more."

IS IN FINE, HEALTHY CONDITION.
Mr. W. H. Achterberg, Converse, Tex., writes: "Since taking your C Remedy, I am feeling better than I ever have before. I am in a fine and healthy condition."

MONEY WELL SPENT.
Mr. J. A. Perry, Miami, Florida, writes: "I did not write to you before, because I wished to see if the effects of your C Remedy were lasting. I am now proud to say the five dollars I paid for your Treatment were the best I ever spent. It is many months now since I took your Treatment, and I have no desire for tobacco. I have tried to chew, but it tasted worse than the first chew. I am better in every particular and weigh ten pounds more than before."

HE WAS A CIGARETTE FIEND.
Mr. Fritz A. Garrett, Box 2, Zona, La., writes: "I have been smoking cigarettes for several years. I can realize now that I have done the right thing in taking your treatment as I had become a cigarette fiend, but I never think of using them at all now. My nerves are steadier and my complexion is better; it does not have that yellow tint any more."

HE SMOKED FOR 34 YEARS.
Mr. P. J. Lapp, 1325 Stark Ave., Canton, O., writes: "I have used your C Treatment and am more than pleased with the results. I had used tobacco for about 34 years, in fact, I could not do without it, but I am now completely freed of the habit. I cannot say enough in praise of your Treatment and I certainly recommend it."

NEVER FELT BETTER IN HIS LIFE.
Mr. Andrew Thrapp, Waldo, Kansas, writes: "After having waited a long time, I can now write you that I have been entirely freed from the tobacco habit. I have had the tobacco-habit for ten years and I can say that I never was so glad of anything in my life, as when I found out that I was freed of the accursed habit. I never felt better in all my life, than since I took your C Treatment, and I can cheerfully recommend it to anyone."

HE TRIED TO GIVE IT UP.
Mr. Wm. M. Merrill, Antrim, N. H., writes: "I have taken your C Treatment with great success, for I have been freed entirely of the tobacco habit. I have been a user of tobacco for years and have tried again and again to give it up, but I would always have to go back to it again; will-power, etc., would fail to keep me away from tobacco, but when I commenced your Treatment, the appetite almost immediately left me."

SMOKED TWENTY CIGARS DAILY.
Mr. B. F. Williams, McLain, Miss., writes: "I took your C Treatment for the tobacco-habit and haven't had any desire for tobacco in any form since. I believe I am permanently freed of the habit. I smoked all the time except when asleep; often 20 cigars daily."

A LADY GIVES UP USING TOBACCO.
Mrs. Emer Carillien, Ludington, La., writes: "Your C Treatment is just as you recommend it to be, for it has entirely freed me of the tobacco-habit. I cannot praise it high enough. I have been a constant user of tobacco for the last twenty-two years, it seemed I could not possibly do without it, but now, thanks to you, I haven't the least desire for it. My health also has improved wonderfully."

FEELS A THOUSAND TIMES BETTER.
Mr. John Rabanus, Frazee, Minn., writes: "I wish to thank you for what your C Treatment has done for me. I am a man of strong will-power, but I never could overcome the craving I had for both chewing and smoking tobacco. Since taking your Treatment, I have lost all desire for tobacco in any form and feel a thousand times better in every way."

SNUFF RUINS HEALTH.
Miss Harriet Martin, Marietta, Okla., writes: "I have used snuff for 25 years, but since taking your C Treatment, my snuff habit was overcome."

HEALTH IMPROVED WONDERFULLY.
Mr. J. D. Hancock, 1606 Third St., Lynchburg, Va., writes: "I have taken your C Set of Remedies and can truthfully say that I am completely freed of the tobacco-habit. Since taking your treatment, I have not had the least craving for tobacco in any form. My health has improved wonderfully."

IT SAVED HIM MONEY.
Mr. Otto Haidenwanger, Fort Casey, Wash., writes: "I have taken your Treatment as per your directions and I am doing fine. I can say that I didn't feel as good as at present, for a long time. I am glad I took your Treatment for not only did it save me money, but it improved my health & I am feeling entirely like a new person."

IT TOOK AWAY ALL DESIRE.
Mr. N. S. Gregg, 804 N. Nat. Ave., Fort Scott, Kansas, writes: "Your C Treatment for the tobacco-habit has taken away from me all desire and craving for the vile weed. I can advise all who wish to quit the use of tobacco, to use your C Treatment; it is very reliable in its work."

USED TOBACCO SINCE 10 YEARS OLD.
Mr. Fred M. Hunt, Calumet, Mass, writes: "I can truly say that I have given up the tobacco-habit for good and all. There has been a great change and although I have been using tobacco since I was 10 years of age, both in smoking and chewing, I experienced little trouble while taking your Remedies. The craving has gone and I am freed of the tobacco-habit."

WILL-POWER DID NOT HELP HIM.
Mr. J. E. McCabe, 119 McKinley Ave., Freeport, Ill., writes: "Since I took your C Treatment for the tobacco-habit, I note a great improvement in both my mental and physical conditions. I don't remember feeling better at any period in my life. I have smoked heavily for the past 10 years, but I have used my last cigar. Since I took your Treatment, I have not touched tobacco and never expect to again."

NOTED SCIENTIST'S ANALYSIS.
Prof. Wentworth Lascelles-Scott, noted medico-chemical expert, certifies: "The preparations comprised in the Woods C Treatment, are well calculated to be effective in overcoming the tobacco habit. They are of great purity, excellent quality and free from injurious narcotics. The remedies contain genuine sodium chloride of gold."

ALL DESIRE OR CRAVING IS REMOVED FOR Pipe, Cigars, Chewing Tobacco, Cigarettes, Snuff.

TOBACCO HABIT CONQUERED IN 72 HOURS

I offer a genuine guaranteed remedy for tobacco or snuff habit in 72 hours. It is mild, pleasant, strengthening. Overcomes that peculiar nervousness and craving for cigarettes, cigars, pipe, chewing tobacco or snuff. Tobacco is poisonous and seriously injures the health in several ways, causing such disorders as nervous dyspepsia, sleeplessness, gas, belching, gnawing, or other uncomfortable sensation in stomach; constipation, headache, weak eyes, loss of vigor, red spots on skin, throat irritation, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, heart failure, lung trouble, melancholy, neurasthenia, impotency, loss of memory and will-power, impure (poisoned) blood, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, neuritis, heartburn, torpid liver, loss of appetite, bad teeth, foul breath, lassitude, lack of ambition, weakening and falling out of hair and many other disorders. It is unsafe and torturing to attempt to cure yourself of tobacco and snuff habit by suddenly stopping—don't do it. The correct method is to eliminate the nicotine poison from the system, strengthen the weakened, irritated membranes and gradually overcome the craving. You can quickly and easily quit tobacco and enjoy yourself a thousand times better while feeling always in robust health. My FREE book tells all about the wonderful 3 days Method. Marion Craig Wentworth Writes Play

MRS. ALICE WENTWORTH

Wentworth Wedded Miss Alice Chapman After His Wife Secured a Divorce.

New facts in connection with the Rockefeller marriage of Franklin H. Wentworth to Miss Alice Chapman, published exclusively in yesterday's Sunday AMERICAN, were obtained in Washington today from the clergyman who performed the ceremony.

Unlike the noted Ruskin case of history, it was the woman in this romance that made the sacrifice. Mrs. Marion Craig Wentworth, a brilliant Boston reader and playwright, gave up her husband to her friend, Alice Chapman.

The couple were married in the First Presbyterian Church in Washington on Nov. 6 by the Rev. Donald C. McLeod. Charles F. Nesbit, an investment and insurance broker in Washington, was a witness to the ceremony. Immediately after the wedding the couple left Washington for Old Point Comfort.

"Wentworth and his first wife decided to separate," said Nesbit in Washington today. "She went to California and remained a year. He obtained a divorce, she entering no objection."

The clergyman when asked yesterday about performing the ceremony denied it. He explained today that he had made a mistake in looking over his books.

Marion Wentworth Playwright.

The Wentworths arranged for the wife to secure a divorce, and the husband then married Miss Alice Chapman.

The reviews of the play, coming almost coincidently with the news of Mr. Wentworth's marriage to the girl to whom his wife virtually gave him, are of extraordinary interest. It is as though Mrs. Wentworth had written her own ideals of married life into the play.

Miss Mabel Caldwell Willard, with whom Mrs. Wentworth has made her home, says in a review of the play in "The Flower Shop" in the Woman's Journal.

Marion Craig Wentworth's first play, "The Flower Shop," gives remarkable promise. It is noble in conception, lofty in purpose, and brilliant in achievement. No less surely does it find its place with the romantic plays, for the drama of love throbs through its lines with all the force of the elemental passion.

The play is alive—vital—pulsing with the love of the individual woman for the one man, which stirs her heart to its depths as she races him whom she loves with a free-woman's love.

Views of Marriage.

There is keen analysis of motive; there is color—the characters stand out in strong contrast, voicing the different attitudes towards marriage.

We have Polly, for whom dependent love is enough; Lena, lonely and hungry for children, accepting marriage without love, so long as it is "respectable"; Mary, saved from the streets, knowing that a loveless marriage is in reality no more respectable than the life from which she has escaped.

The plot relates the crucial experience in the lives of two beautiful and gifted women, Louise Ramsey and Margaret Kendall. They had won for themselves renown as singers of opera, when their voices were lost in an epidemic. Louise later marries William Ramsey, who had previously loved Margaret Kendall.

Hides from Sweetheart.

Margaret, conceiving that woman has a life of her own to live, that marriage should not be a profession, a trade, but indeed a "marriage of true minds," hides herself in a strange city under her mother's maiden name, fearing lest the struggle with loneliness and poverty my lead her to yield to the love of Stephen Hartwell.

Without a home, without friends, she faces the problems of self-support, and solves it through her Flower shop. When she has achieved success, she knows that her love for Stephen Hartwell has been no mere longing for protection and companionship, but a great, overwhelming passion.

Suddenly life changes—Margaret's hiding place is discovered—and we have the four together, Margaret, William Ramsey, Louise and Stephen Hartwell.

The problem changes also—it is no longer the old economic one of self-support. Margaret has already "won out" in that. It is the question as to whether a woman may be both wife and artist—whether she may have full and complete joy of love as a woman, and the full and complete joy of life as a human being.

Margaret tries to make clear that economic freedom involves much more than mere independence.

Mrs. Alice Chapman Wentworth, formerly Miss Alice Chapman, is the girl Wentworth married after his first wife had arranged with him for a divorce.

EVERETT OPENS SHAKE-UP TODAY

department on which the safety of the public so largely depends."

In the case of Finnegan, Commissioner Everett this afternoon announced the suspended supervisor will be given a hearing on the charges against him on Saturday morning. This will be conducted before the commissioner.

Finnegan's salary as supervisor is $2,000 a year. The Finance Commission recommended that he be ousted from the building department.

After the conference, Mayor Fitzgerald said today:

The report is one of the best the Finance Commission has ever made. It is constructive as well as critical. Where the commission found much to criticise in the department, yet they could see where Mr. Everett was not entirely to blame.

In previous investigations, city departments have been castigated because conditions were not found to be satisfactory and the department heads shouldered the blame. Mr. Everett is a man of integrity, and his general administration has been good.

I shall have another talk with Commissioner Everett. We shall put all the recommendations of the report into effect where possible.

I had heard ugly rumors in regard to the Building Department and that was why I urged the investigation and the report.

In the case of the Hanover street building collapse, in which several deaths occured, the Finance Commission says that Everett did not examine the plan, but granted a permit for reconstruction upon the say-so of an employe.

Bribes of cash, wine and turkeys, the commission charges, have been paid men in the department to pass improper work.

Here are the defects in the Building Department as the Finance Commission sums them up:

Imperfections in the organization.
Lack of proper direction.
Absence of proper discipline.
Influence of politics.
Retention of certain employes.

In the course of their findings against the Building Department the Finance Commission makes the following charges:

The Commissioner has not been active enough in hunting down rumors of graft . . . Nor has he dealt with his employes with sufficient severity in maintain discipline in a department on which the safety of the public so largely depends.

He might have secured the removal of employes who were a detriment to the department.

The loose system which prevailed invited shirking, but better results are now being obtained.

A construction engineer should be placed at the head of the plans department at $3,500 a year.

A contractor, or a building superintendent, should be appointed as supervisor in the construction department at a salary of $3,000, the present head of the division, Edward J. Turner, at his present salary of $2,500 a year, to become an assistant.

An assistant in this division should be chosen at a salary of $2,500 a year.

The present supervisor of gas, David A. Finnegan, should be ousted, it being charged he borrowed money from gas fitters who looked for favors in return and was also involved with professional money sharks.

The defects in the Building Department are traceable to imperfections in the organization, to the lack of proper direction, to the absence of proper discipline and to the influence of politics in the employment and retention of certain employes.

The system now existing is far better than that which existed when the Finance Commission's investigation began, and at that time was better than it was when the present building commissioner first assumed charge of the department.

The commission believes that if certain necessary changes herein recommended are made, the building commissioner be given a free hand and strict discipline be enforced the department will be administered in a proper manner hereafter.

ROOSEVELT REFUSES TO REPLY AT PRESENT TO TAFT'S N. H. CHARGE

OYSTER BAY, Nov. 25.—Colonel Roosevelt declined to make any comment upon the statement of President Taft in his letter to Norman H. White that the Colonel, while President, had sanctioned the absorption of competing steamship lines by the New Haven Railroad.

The ex-President's attention was drawn to the accusation of the President by a representative of the AMERICAN. Mr. Roosevelt shook his head and declared that, for the present at least, he would have "nothing to say."

"I may have some comment to make upon it when I go to New York on Tuesday," asserted the Colonel, "Until then I must decline to speak."

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

U. S. SENATOR RAYNER DEAD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—United States Senator Isidor Rayner of Maryland, after a protracted illness, died at 6:20 A. M. of acute nephritis. Members of his family had been summoned to the Rayner residence before midnight last night and they remained in the sick room until the end came. They were Mrs. Rayner, son, William B. Rayner; Albert Rayner, a brother from Baltimore, and Robert W. Wells and wife, the latter a niece of the Senator.

Through the death of Senator Rayner, Maryland's senior Senator, the State will have one Democrat and one Republican in the upper house of Congress when that body meets in December. As the Maryland Legislature does not meet until January, 1914, Governor Goldsborough, who is a Republican, will appoint Senator Rayner's successor. William J. Jackson of Salisbury, is, it is reported, the likely appointee.

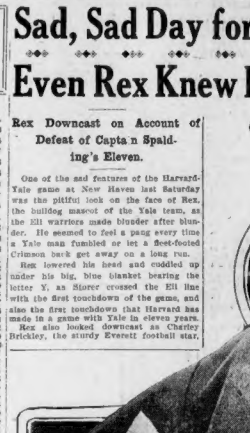
Sad, Sad Day for Yale's Bulldog Mascot

Even Rex Knew It Was All Over With Eli



REX, THE MASCOT OF THE YALE ELEVEN

Rex Downcast on Account of Defeat of Captain Spalding's Eleven.

One of the sad features of the Harvard-Yale game at New Haven last Saturday was the pitiful look on the face of Rex, the bulldog mascot of the Yale team, as the Eli warriors made blunder after blunder. He seemed to feel a pang every time a Yale man fumbled or let a fleet-footed Crimson back get away on a long run.

Rex lowered his head and cuddled up under his big, blue blanket bearing the letter Y, as Signor crossed the Eli line with the first touchdown of the game, and also the first touchdown that Harvard has made in a game with Yale in eleven years.

Rex also looked downcast as Charley Brickley, the sturdy Everett football star, boosted his two goals from the field and late in the game scored a touchdown.

The gallant bulldog has been with the Yale team all season. He has escaped from the sidelines all the contests in which the Eli warriors have engaged. He saw the team batter down the defenses of the small colleges. He watched the Blue men as they battled against Brown when they rallied and won the game in the last two periods.

This stout-hearted beast yelped happily as the tide of battle changed in the game against Princeton. He barked joyously when Pumpelly made the day for Old Eli by booting a goal from the field in the finish with the score 6 to 6 tied.

And Then He Was Gloomy.

When Rex trotted on to the field at New Haven, he was cheered enthusiastically by the Yale rooters. And he felt proud. He realized he was the mascot of the team of which Yale men expected so much; that those old warriors who had won honors for the Blue of Yale in the past expected the 1912 eleven to down the sturdy Crimson lads. Rex felt responsible for the playing of Spalding's men.

That is why he was so gloomy when Harvard swept all before it; when the Blue line crumbled before the onslaught of the mighty Crimson backs; when the sensational Brickley tore around the ends for long runs and when the Everett boy booted the pigskin between the uprights.

After the game, Rex refused to be comforted. He growled at Yale men who patted his head. He wanted to be alone in his sorrow. It was indeed a sad day in the life of the 1912 mascot of the Yale football eleven.

CUBS PLAYER LEADS BATTERS

The official batting averages of the National League, which were made public today give Heine Zimmerman of the Chicago Cubs, the honors for 1912. Zimmerman's average for the season was .372.

Next in line to the Cubs slugger comes "Big Chief" Meyers, the Indian catcher of the Giants. Meyers average was .358 for the season.

Third position among the batters fell to our own Bill Sweeney of the Pilgrims, He made 204 hits for a total of 264 bases. He got thirty-one doubles, thirteen triples and one home run. Sweeney played his worth as a sacrifice hitter, having thirty-three to his credit. He pilfered the scene twenty-seven times.

Following are the averages of the other Pilgrim players: Kirke .320, Kling .317, Titus .309, Campbell .296, Devlin .289, Hosser .286, Donnelly .275, Gowdy .271, Jackson .262, McDonald .259, Spratt .258, Hess .243, Bridwell .236, Rariden .222, Brown .211, Marsaville .208, Tyler .195, Dickson .167, Perdue .138 and O'Rourke .122.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

THE Holdout League is beginning early this year. In fact, the members of this time-honored organization are forcing the season. The proper time for activities in this league is the late Winter and early Spring, but here it is November and already half a dozen ball players are delivering ultimata (Hiley, who once studied at Cornell, says this word is correct). Why, the magnates have not even thought of sending out contracts for next year.

The first of the holdouts to make himself heard was Jimmy Archer, catcher of the Chicago Cubs. Anything that makes President Murphy peevish is a contribution to the gaiety of nations. Archer announces he will retire from the national pastime next year unless he is tendered a contract calling for a salary of $5,500.

Joe Tinker, also of the Cubs, has also decared himself. He has told all whom it might concern that unless he was released to the Cincinnati Club so that he could manage that organization, he would give up baseball for good and start in selling automobiles. Later Tinker hedged to the extent of saying he would never be satisfied to play under the management of Johnny Evers. It is expected that he will eventually succeed in getting the berth he wants at Cincinnati, but the matter has not yet been definitely settled. But if he doesn't land in Redtown, he will not be of much use to the Cubs.

TY COBB was close behind Archer in his announcement. The world's series was hardly over before he caused to be published in the newspapers the fact that he would absolutely quit the game for good and engage in the cotton brokerage business unless the Detroit Club paid him $15,000 for his services next year. Up to this writing President Navin has not made any comment on Cobb's ad.

Next comes Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Club, who wants a lot more money than he thinks President Somers will offer him. It is said that Jackson can read and write no better than a five-year-old child, so it must be that Jackson has some other vocation in view other than bookkeeping which is the usual threat handed out by the holdouts. But what Joe would do if he didn't play ball is a mystery unless he tried digging ditches or some equally brainy occupation.

But when all is said and done nightly few ball players retire of their own accord. There are, of course, exceptions to the general rule. Big Jim McCormick, one of the greatest ball players the game ever produced, gave up the spangles and retired to private life in California.

John M. Ward quit the game while he still had a few more years of good baseball life in him and took up the practice of law.

Wolgast to Defend Title in Battle With Ritchie

By JACK CONWAY.

TWO important lightweight battles will be staged on the Pacific Coast Thanksgiving Day. Ad Wolgast, the doughty lad from Cadillac, will meet Willie Ritchie at Daly city in a twenty-round contest in which the lightweight championship hangs in the balance.

The other bout will be between Joe Rivers, the sensational Mexican, and Joe Mandot, the pride of Dixie land. Mandot is picked to defeat Rivers while Wolgast is expected to lower the colors of Ritchie.

RITCHIE HAS MADE A NEAT RECORD.

If the "dope" is not upset, the champion and Mandot will meet some time late in December or early in January of next year.

The Wolgast-Ritchie affair has aroused a tremendous amount of enthusiasm in sporting circles and it should be so for Ritchie is one of the most promising lightweights in the land. A year ago he was almost unknown outside of San Francisco while today he is considered a serious contender for the championship.

Ritchie got his first opportunity to win fame in the squared arena on last Thanksgiving Day. Freddy Welsh, the present English lightweight champion, was scheduled to meet Wolgast in a battle for the title at Vernon, Cal.

On the eve of the struggle, Wolgast was stricken with appendicitis and was forced to call off his go with the boxer from across the Atlantic.

Ritchie Made Long Trip.

On the afternoon of November 24, Ritchie received a wire from Tom McCarey reading as follows: "Will you meet Freddy Welsh tomorrow (Thanksgiving)? If acceptable take the afternoon train for the South."

Ritchie boarded the train for the South, rode 500 miles and took breakfast in a downtown Los Angeles cafe. Willie was subwarded and was even unattended by a manager or a pal. He was among strangers but his courage never deserted him for a moment. He finally secured a co-pilot of handlers and made his way to the Arena at Vernon, where he introduced himself to McCarey.

The veteran promoter thought that Ritchie was twenty-six or twenty-seven years of age when he sent him his wire, and was taken by surprise at his youthful appearance. "How old are you?" he asked.

Never mind, I can fight," responded Ritchie.

Willie was engaged to box Welsh and he donned ring togs immediately as the "fans" were already gathered around the ringside and were eager for hostilities to begin.

When the men shook hands, they presented a great contrast. Welsh was well groomed, was smiling and evidently thought that he would rip it with ease.

Ritchie, on the other hand, appeared tired and care worn. The long train ride had, of course, done him no good, while he had not trained a day for the contest. Regardless of this handicap he gave Welsh a stirring battle for twenty rounds and in the latter part of the bout he was carrying the fight to the Welshman.

Got Bout with Wolgast.

Ritchie's showing against Welsh attracted widespread attention. He secured many good dates afterwards and the May he was secured as an opponent for Wolgast. The bout was only a four-round affair and was arranged in order to test the "Michigan Wildcat's" strength.

No decision was given, but the majority of the critics at the ringside slated the Ritchie had the best of the mixing. He kept after his opponent from the tap of the gong and gave him a terrific beating.

That was seven months ago when Ritchie just regaining his strength after being operated upon. The distance of the bout was also four rounds. Ritchie is a product of the four-round clubs while Wolgast has always done his best work in twenty-round contests.

If Wolgast is at his best, he should defeat Ritchie Thursday. He will have to be at his best, however, as the latter is one of the classiest 133 pounders in the land and is just chock full of grit and ambition, two essential qualifications for ring success.

The Mandot-Rivers bout should also be a stirring affair. When these men last met Mandot won, but Rivers is confident that he will reverse the tables on Turkey Day.

BIG NINE CONFERENCE MAY GET MICHIGAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The return of the University of Michigan to the "Big Nine" conference and its participation in conference athletics no later than next Spring was predicted by men in close touch with the situation here today after a secret meeting of conference representatives. A committee was named to take up the matter with the University of Michigan senate.

The only feature of Michigan athletics not in accord with conference customs is the training table, and Michigan is said to be willing to forego this.

BROWN AND CARLISLE TO PLAY THURSDAY

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 25.—All the football sharps about Brown University were of the one opinion today that Captain Ashbaugh's eleven must brace up a lot to make a showing against Carlisle here Thanksgiving Day. In the contest with Norwich University Saturday Brown won, 16 to 0.

In the game with the Indians the same lineup as that which confronted Norwich will be presented. Some of Brown's best players are out of the game, however, because of injuries.

The Indians are in poor shape after their hard game with Springfield Saturday.

REVERE WANTS GAME.

The strong Revere Beach A. A. football team, composed of former High, School and college stars, has Thanksgiving Day morning open and would like to arrange a game with any of the very strongest amateur teams in the State, to be played at Revere, full proceeds to the visiting team being guaranteed. Arrangements may be made with Thomas Slaughnessy, Tel. Revere 115-W.

Haughton and Garcelon Favor a Dartmouth Game

That the Dartmouth rumpus has partially subsided, but that there will have to be much discussion before the Dartmouth team is reinstated on the Harvard schedule, is the opinion of both Graduate Treasurer W. F. Garcelon of the Harvard Athletic Association office, one of the principal football authorities at Harvard, and of Coach Percy D. Haughton. According to a statement given out to the Boston AMERICAN from Coach Haughton's office today it was stated:

"The victory with Yale has, of course, allayed much of the disturbance created by the Dartmouth roughness, as although no official action is taken, it can be said pretty definitely that there will be a Dartmouth game next year. The facts of the case are admitted by the Dartmouth men, and action will be taken which will tend to mitigate the evils."

No Personal Quarrel.

As to the alleged difference between Mr. Haughton and President Barrett of the associated Dartmouth alumni clubs, the Haughton statement continued:

That is all fairy talk. Of course there have been misquotations in the papers, and I believe that some misunderstanding did exist. But there was nothing serious in the matter at all, and it has been settled by this time.

Action on the game with Dartmouth will not be taken for awhile. While it is thought that there will be no breakup of relations with them, it is not a question which the football coach's office has to settle at all. The football committee will have to discuss all that, and we are waiting for its action.

Talk Is Premature.

On the same subject Treasurer Garcelon explained that any talk about final action of any sort was premature.

The system which obtains in such matters goes like this. There is a general policy of the association. A subcommittee takes care of the football relations, with a special advisory committee to correspond in case of disagreements in any instance.

In a week or ten days, every possibly earlier, the football committee will take action regarding next year's schedule. If this action is favorable, the date will, of course, be negotiated for. As a matter of fact, the Dartmouth date will not a discussed separately, but in connection with other dates, and if the fotlball committee approves, the athletic committee, composed of graduates, will settle the affair.

FOURTEEN NEW WEARERS OF 'H' AT HARVARD

In addition to Wendell, Gardner, Storer, Parmenter, Hitchcock, Coolidge, Hubbard and Felton —Harvard veterans who earned their "H" long ago on the football field—these new men are entitled to wear the letter on their sweaters hereafter because they appeared at some stage or other in the great Yale game:

S. B. Peacock, '15, of Syracuse, N. Y.
W. R. Trumbull, '15, of Salem.
F. J. O'Brien, '14, of Roxbury.
H. R. Hardwick, '15, of Quincy.
U. K. Brickley, '15, of Everett.
T. N. Frothingham, '15, of Philadelphia.
F. Wigglesworth, '15, of Milton.
G. T. Driscoll, '13, of Brookline.
D. Lawson, '15, of Boston.
P. M. Hollister, '15, of Grand Rapids, Mich.
C. Bradley, '13, of Haverhill.
E. J. Bradlee, '13, of Boston.
E. A. A. Linzard, '13, of Boston.
E. A. Graustein, '13, of Cambridge.

"Victory Was Won by Wendell"—Haughton

"The lion's share of the credit for Harvard's great victory over Yale is due to Captain Percy Wendell," said Percy Haughton, coach of the Harvard eleven. Haughton continued: "Wendell is the greatest ground gainer in the college world.

"Wendell has a wonderful personality and is idolized by all the boys. He gave them a fine example and they always followed him into the thick of the battle.

"Brickley, of course, did some wonderful work, as did Huntington Hardwick. The latter is the most versatile player on the college gridiron. Harvard owes a great deal of its success to the playing of Hardwick.

"Felton's punting was a big factor in deciding Saturday's struggle at New Haven.

"His 'fadeway' punt is so puzzling as Christy Mathewson's 'fadeaway' and if had the Yale backs guessing. They should not be blamed for making fumbles. Yes, it was a great victory for the Crimson. I wish to thank the members of the Harvard eleven for their fine work. They all did nobly."

BRICKLEY KING OF 1912 GAME

Charley Brickley, the mighty Harvard football star, has been crowned king of the college gridiron players by the football experts and followers of the country. The Everett boy has proved that he is without a peer.

Brickley is a sophomore at Harvard and as a result will be with the team for two more years. He is improving daily and should be even better in 1913 than he is now if such a thing is possible. Following are statements by some of the leading football authorities in the country in which they give their opinion of Charley the Great.

By PERCY HAUGHTON.

(Harvard Football Coach.)

Charlie Brickley maintained his reputation as the best drop-kicker in the country, and to this he has added that of being an exceptionally clever halfback. Not only did he make more punts, but he made more ground than any man on either team.

By MAURICE B. "LEFTY" FLYNN.

(Yale's Star Fullback.)

Charley Brickley is one of the grandest football players who ever donned armor. He vindicated all the praises that have been sung over him. He is the most versatile back I have ever seen. He is a ripping, rushing, tearing human dynamo of inexhaustible energy. He was stronger at the finish than when he started. He is a wonderful line smasher, a wonderful runner and the hardest fellow to tackle that can be imagined. Add to this his cunning as a kicker and you have —if not the ideal football player—at least as near an approach to it as is possible.

By W. H. ("BIG BILL") EDWARDS.

(Former Princeton Football Hero.)

Brickley is, as everyone knows, a marvelous football player. He proved Saturday to be as good a line bucker as a drop kicker. He is, in fact, as remarkable an all-round athlete as any of our colleges have produced in recent years. His goals were well planned and kicked to perfection.

By PAUL WITHINGTON.

(Asst.-Graduate Treas., Harvard A. A.)

Brickley played the greatest game of his career and demonstrated to the satisfaction of all his friends that the dastardly attack published Friday by the Boston press and purporting to come from a former Exeter coach was entirely untrue to say the least. Never has Brickley shown to better advantage and his playing Saturday was more skilful and harder than at any time this year. He played errorless ball and he was in every play throughout the game.

By DR. ARTHUR E. BRIDES.

(Once Famous Yale Tackle.)

Brickley, because of his wonderful kicking and line plunging, deserves a place in football fame second to none.

By ROBERT T. FISHER.

(Captain of Harvard in 1911.)

Just as Felton upheld the honors in punting so did Brickley come up to all expectations in his drop kicking. Two successful ties out of four in a Harvard and Yale contest is a record which Brickley may well be proud of. But Brickley's kicking was only one of his many good points which he displayed in the game.

By HENRY H. HOBBS.

(Former Yale Tackle.)

Brickley was the most conspicuous man on the field. He scored a touchdown on a fast run around Yale's left end. He kicked two pretty field goals. He also made a brilliant run after intercepting a forward pass. His second-ary defence against both line-rushing and open plays left little to be desired. Brickley was in all respects a finished player.

By JAMES W. SCULLY, Jr.

(Yale's Line Coach.)

Brickley played a wonderful game and was directly responsible for fourteen of the twenty points scored. His drop kicking was the best ever seen in a Yale-Harvard game and his general headwork on the defense and coolness stamp him as being a great football player. He ran well with the ball, hitting the line with great drives and showing some great form in end running. In fact, the playing of the whole Harvard backfield offensively and defensively could hardly be improved.

By HAMILTON FISH, Jr.

(Former Harvard Tackle.)

In Brickley Harvard has not only a great back, but a splendid drop kicker who can get the ball away quicker and surer than any one who has played in the game for a long while.

Brickley Big Scorer

Star Made 94 Points

Brickley—6 touchdowns, 13 goals from field, 1 goal from touchdown; total 94 points. Hardwick—4 touchdowns, 4 goals from touchdowns; total, 28 points. Bettle—2 touchdowns; total ,12 points. Storer 1—touchdown; total 6 points. Wendell—1 touchdown; total 6 points. Graustein—1 touchdown; total, 6 points. Freedley—1 touchdown; total, 6 points. Coolidge—1 touchdown; total, 6 points. Hitchcock—2 goals from touchdowns; total, 6 points. T. Frothingham—3 goals from touchdowns; total, 3 points.

Middies Think They Will Beat Cadets

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23.—The Naval Academy football team began today on its final preparations for the game against the Military Academy eleven on Franklin Field, Philadelphia.

The substantial victories over the North Carolina Aggies and the University of New York encourage the Navy contingent greatly, and it is believed here that the chances of another victory this year are at least even. It is said that individually the Navy team is stronger than the Army and that the team work will improve greatly during the week.

A number of positions on the team are uncertain, and Head Coach Howard is unable to even forecast the full make-up of the team at the start of the Army game. It is certain that two full backfields will be used. Bodie, Leonard, McIlvaney and Harrison will probably start, and be alternated with Nichols, Alexander, Failing, Cook and perhaps others.

West Point in Fine Condition.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The Army eleven will take things easy for the remainder of the week in anticipation of its game with the Navy on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Saturday. There was much satisfaction felt in Army circles here over the condition of the team. The stories coming from the Navy camp to the effect that there has been trouble in deciding on the composition of the Navy team had caused the followers of the Army to do considerable quiet wagering. The Army team probably will leave here Thursday for Philadelphia.

WANT NEW YALE COACHING PLANS

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 23.—Radical changes are expected in the coaching of the 1913 Yale football team. The present coaching system has proved a failure and it is believed that a permanent coach will take charge of affairs here next Fall. The present agitation has been caused by Yale's defeat Saturday by Harvard by a score of 20 to 0.

Plans for next year's football coaching system will be taken up by the new athletic committee during the Winter, but it is impossible to forecast their action. Most of the older football alumni with a graduate coach of experience appointed for a series of years, demanding that a progressive system be established, and pointing out that Yale has won from Harvard only once in the past four years.

Till this year the question would have been settled surely by the football captain for next year.

A new athletic constitution was adopted last Spring turning over matters of athletic policy to the new committee, which was then chosen and which has organized this Fall for action. The undergraduate members of the committee, including the captains and managers of the four minor sports issue, are a majority on the committee.

Springfield Would Play Carlisle Again

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 23.—Coach McCurdy of the Young Men's Christian Association College football team conferred with Coach Warner of the Carlisle Indians after the game Saturday with regard to a game with the Indian school eleven next year. The matter was talked over thoroughly, but no definite arrangement was made.

In order to get the team here for another game it will be necessary for the Indians to have some game with a college in this section of the country for Thanksgiving Day, as Coach Warner wishes to have at least two games scheduled for a trip into this section.

Holy Cross to Leave for St. Louis Today

WORCESTER, Nov. 23.—The Holy Cross football eleven will start on its 2,800 mile trip to St. Louis tonight. The team is scheduled to battle with St. Louis University on Thanksgiving Day in a game to decide the championship of the Catholic colleges of America.

DETECT STUDENTS WHO SOLD THEIR TICKETS

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 23.—Many Harvard and Yale students were detected disposing of tickets to speculators last week. It is stated here that fifty Yale students sold their tickets to "scalpers," while half that number of Crimson followers disposed of their pasteboards in that way.

CORNELL MEN REST.

ITHACA, Nov. 23.—With the hard work of the practice season all over, the Cornell football squad rested today and packed up preparatory to leaving for Atlantic City, where they will rest up and put the finishing touches on the plays to be used against Pennsylvania Thanksgiving Day.

Felton's 'Fadeway' Punt Is the Mystery of Gridiron

By RILEY.

We take off our hat to Sam Felton. And we regret that Sam is now putting on the finishing touches of his education preparatory to going back home from Harvard in the merry baseball season of next June. Also is it to be mourned that Sam Felton, M. P., which is the important Harvard degree Master of Punting, will carry with him the secret of the famous "Felton fadeway" curve kick. For we learn from no less an authority than "Boots" Brickley himself, that notwithstanding Felton's tremendous proficiency in the delivery of the "Felton fadeway," Sam has not yet learned how he does it, nor can he teach the art or bequeath it to future Harvard kickers. For that "Felton fadeway," kicking clear a path for Brickley's boots and dashes, made Harvard undisputed football champion of the world for the first time since football was invented.

* * *

THE mystery of the Felton punt, as related heretofore in this column, is the great puzzle of 1912. We learn by resorting once more to "Boots" Brickley and "Tacks" Hardwick—thats whom no observers could be more observant—that when Felton puts his left toe under the oblate spheroid (as the football is called at Harvard) he imparts to it an agitation that carves the ball as erratically as a "spitball" in the other American sport to which Boston was also so proficient this year.

* * *

NO observer such as the 40,000 who saw Harvard lick Dartmouth and the 35,000 who witnessed that Yale game Saturday would imagine the "fade" intended by that ball as it "fades" away from Felton's toe. The ball floats through the air with deceptive peacefulness. It does not glide as footballs often do. It shoots along like a projectile. But for what really happens we refer you to Mr. Dewitt Mr. Pendleton and Mr. Blake" Baker, the renowned Princeton scientists—to Messrs. Whitney, Morey and Llewellyn of Dartmouth and lastly, and most respectfully, to Mr. Wheeler, Cornell and Flynn of Yale. Their evidence is important.

* * *

"No punt looks easier to catch than Felton's, yet none is harder. The ball goes away above the highest nails of a football field, and we seem to have it located with the utmost ease. We stand where decisive eyesight tells us that the ball should drop. Our arms are outstretched for it. But just as it approaches us it takes a wonderful magic curve, screws about in most exasperating fashion and then falls where we never expected it to alight, or curves away around to one side of us. Whereupon the ball bounds up and down most eccentrically as if it were imbued with some odd legerdemain. That 'Felton fadeway' beat us all this year. Thank Mike it goes hence now."

* * *

SO we need not blame Wheeler, Cornell and Flynn for failing to do what others nearly as skilled as they were reputed to be, could not do—namely, catch the "Felton fadeway." Poor little Wheeler! The blood of all but wept as the Yale coaches removed him from the game Saturday after his second fumble gave Brickley the opportunity to kick the second score of the game. But "Lefty" Flynn failed, too, and another score followed. Cornell could do no better than either Wheeler or Flynn. Nor did the expedient of sending back two men to get Felton's punts help Yale a bit.

* * *

WHILE looking over the list of heroes who returned to Cambridge today we can't forget R. S. P. Storer. It used to be common in pugilistic and other sporting circles to engrave upon invitations to barbecues and world's championship affairs the mysterious letters "R. S. V. P.," and we now learn from Out Abar, the distinguished philosopher, that that mount Storer, or "please respond." If anybody in sportdom ever responded better than Storer did Saturday, he has studiously concealed his identity. For, upon Mr. Wheeler's kind invitation Mr. Storer responded with the utmost dispatch at Yale field it has ever been our lot to witness. Just how the heavy tackle could go clattering from his own 20-yard line to Yale's 45-yard line ahead of all his supposedly speedier teammates, pick up a bobbing pigskin with such dexterity that he never eased up a bit, and then hasten to that sacred Yale goal line is almost as mysterious as the "Felton fadeway." But his response to the invitation and the opportunity showed that Mr. Storer was a perfect Harvard gentleman.

* * *

SO again we take off our hat to Sam Felton and we say, without fear of contradiction, that notwithstanding "Boots" Brickley—one of the greatest backs in the history of football—won the football championship for Harvard, it was Sam Felton's mysterious curve kick that gave Brickley his opportunity to shine.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

"THE CASE OF OSCAR SLATER"---By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

SHERLOCK HOLMES In Real Life

The Sherlock Holmes of fiction is a figure well known the world over. The real flesh and blood Sherlock Holmes of every day life is seen in a pamphlet that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has written on "The Case of Oscar Slater," condemned for murder in 1909 and now in penal servitude.

Sir Conan Doyle believes that Oscar Slater is not guilty of the crime of which he was convicted, and he tells in a clear, concise way the story of the tragedy and the reasons why the man was wrongly condemned.

It is a story of deep mystery, as interesting as the most improbable fiction the great novelist ever conceived.

The AMERICAN today publishes the first instalment of Doyle's pamphlet. Other instalments will follow.

Suddenly they heard "a noise from above, then a very heavy fall, and then three sharp knocks"

FIRST INSTALMENT

It is impossible to read and weigh the facts in connection with the conviction of Oscar Slater in May, 1909, at the High Court in Edinburgh, without feeling deeply disatisfied with the proceedings, and morally certain that justice was not done. Under the circumstances of Scotch law I am not clear how far any remedy exists, but it will, in my opinion, be a serious scandal if the man is allowed upon such evidence to spend his life in a convict prison. The verdict which led to his condemnation to death was given by a jury of fifteen, who voted: Nine for "Guilty," five for "Not proven" and one for "Not guilty."

Under English law, this division of opinion would naturally have given cause for a new trial. In Scotland the man was condemned to death, he was only reprieved two days before his execution, and he is now working out a life sentence in Peterhead convict establishment. How far the verdict was a just one, the reader may judge for himself when he has perused a connected story of the case.

There lived in Glasgow, in the year 1908, an old maiden lady named Miss Marion Gilchrist. She had lived for thirty years in the one flat which was on the first floor in No. 16 Queen's terrace. The flat above hers was vacant, and the only immediate neighbors were a family named Adams, living on the ground floor below, their house having a separate door, which was close alongside the flat entrance.

The old lady had one servant, named Helen Lambie, who was a girl twenty-one years of age. This girl had been with Miss Gilchrist for three or four years.

By all accounts Miss Gilchrist was a most estimable person, leading a quiet and uneventful life. She was comfortably off, and she had one singular characteristic for a lady of her age and surroundings, in that she had made a collection of jewelry of considerable value. These jewels, which took the form of brooches, rings, pendants, etc., were bought at different times, extending over a considerable number of years, from a reputable jeweler.

Her Jewelry

I lay stress upon the fact, as some wild rumor was circulated at the time that the old lady might herself be a criminal receiver. Such an idea could not be entertained, the seldom wore her jewelry, save in single pieces, and as her life was a retired one, it is difficult to see how any one outside a very small circle could have known of her hoard. The value of this treasure was about three thousand pounds, it was a fearful joy which she snatched from its possession, for she more than once expressed apprehension that she might be attacked and robbed. Her fears had the practical result that she attached two patent locks to her front door, and that she arranged with the Adams family underneath in case of alarm she would signal them by knocking upon the floor.

It was the household practice that Lambie, the maid, should go out and get an evening paper for her mistress about 7 o'clock each day. After bringing the paper she then usually went out again upon the same errand. This routine was followed upon the night of December 21. She left her mistress seated by the fire in the dining room, reading a magazine. Lambie took the keys with her, shut the flat door, closed the hall door downstairs, and was gone about ten minutes upon her errand. It is in the events of those ten minutes which form the tragedy and the mystery which were so soon to engage the attention of the public.

According to the girl's evidence, it was a minute or two before 7 when she went out. At about 7 Mr. Arthur Adams and his two sisters were in their dining room, immediately below the room in which the old lady had been left. Suddenly they heard a noise from above, then a very heavy fall, and then three sharp knocks." They were alarmed at the sound, and the young man at once set off to see if all was right. He ran out of his hall door, through the hall door of the flats, which was open, and so up to the first floor, where he found Miss Gilchrist's door shut. He rang three times without an answer. From within, however, he heard a sound which he compared to the breaking of sticks. He imagined, therefore, that the servant girl was within, and that she was engaged in her household duties.

After waiting for a minute or two, he seems to have convinced himself that all was right. He therefore descended again and returned to his sisters, who persuaded him to go up once more to the flat. This he did, and rang for the fourth time. As he was standing with his hand upon the bell, straining his ears and hearing nothing, some one approached up the stairs from below. It was the young servant maid, Helen Lambie, returning from her errand. The two held counsel for a moment. Young Adams described the noise which had been heard. Lambie said that the pulleys of the clotheslines in the kitchen must have given way.

It was a singular explanation, since the kitchen was not above the dining room of the Adamses, and one would not expect any great noise from the fall of a cord which suspended sheets or towels. However, it was a moment of agitation, and the girl may have said the first explanation which came into her head. She then put her keys into the two safety locks and opened the door.

At this point there is a curious little discrepancy of evidence. Lambie is prepared to swear that she remained upon the mat beside young Adams. Adams is equally positive that she walked several paces down the hall. This hall was lit by a gas jet, which, turned half up and shining through a colored shade, gave a sufficient, but not a brilliant light.

Says Adams: "I stood at the door on the threshold, half in and half out, and just when the girl got past the clock to go into the kitchen, a well-dressed man appeared. I did not suspect him, and she said nothing; and he came up to me quite pleasantly. I did not suspect anything wrong for the minute. I thought the man was going to speak to me, till he got past me, and then I suspected something wrong, and by that time the girl ran into the kitchen and put the gas up and said it was all right, meaning her pulleys. I said: 'Where is your mistress?' and she went into the dining room. She said: 'Oh, come here!' I just went in and saw this horrible spectacle."

The Murderer

The spectacle in question was the poor old lady lying upon the floor close to the chair in which the servant had last seen her. Her feet were toward the door, her head toward the fireplace. She lay upon a pearly rug, but a skin rug had been thrown across the head. Her injuries were frightful, nearly every bone of her face and skull being smashed. In spite of her dreadful wounds she lingered for a few minutes, but died without showing any sign of consciousness.

The murderer, when he first appeared, had emerged from one of the two bedrooms at the back of the hall, the larger, or spare bedroom, not the old lady's room. On passing back upon the doormat, which he had done with the utmost coolness, he had at once rushed down the stair. It was a dark and drizzly evening, and it seems that he made his way along one or two quiet streets until he was lost in the more crowded thoroughfares. He had left no weapon nor possession of any sort in the old lady's flat, save a box of matches, with which he had lit the gas in the bedroom which he had come from.

In this bedroom a number of articles of value, including a watch, lay upon the dressing table, but none of them had been touched.

A box containing papers had been forced open, and these papers were found scattered upon the floor. If he were really in search of the jewels, he was badly informed, for these were kept among the dresses in the old lady's wardrobe. Later, a single crescent diamond brooch, an article worth perhaps forty or fifty pounds, was found to be missing. Nothing else was taken from the flat.

It is remarkable that though the furniture round about the body was spattered with blood, and no one would have doubted that the murderer's hands must have been stained, no mark was seen upon the half-consumed match with which he had lit the gas, nor upon the match box, the box containing papers, nor any other thing which he may have touched in the bedroom.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

A Nightmare of Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If there is a girl, somewhere in this big world whose hair is auburn and who fears that the fervent color of her locks may drive Love away, let her read the following letter and take hope.

"I am a young man very much in love with a young lady two years my junior. We became engaged while she was visiting in Boston, but she went away to Pittsburgh and didn't tell me she was going, and didn't send me a postcard. She is now back in Boston, and my best friend is calling on her. Would it be proper for me to call, too, as she has never told me our engagement is broken, and I cannot sleep nights, as I always see her red hair in front of me?"

One of the most distressing of all spectacles is a girl pursuing a man, yet letters like this give proof that pursuit is what some men need. Not many, but just a few like this great big, blundering, snail-like man.

His Methods

He was engaged to a girl; she left town; he made no attempt to find out why, then he still loves her to such a maddening degree that she can't sleep nights, as he always sees her red hair in front of him. He knows another man is trying to win her, yet he delays taking action till he learns if action is justifiable.

Does he think he can win her by standing still and moaning?

He can't sleep nights, he says, and he seems to be making up for it by sleeping in the daytime!

The little god Cupid is armed with bow and arrow. There never would have been such a happy word as "serendipity" in the world's vocabulary if this little god of love lay awake all night in the anguish of unrequited affection and yawned all day.

He has weapons to bring down his victims, and he uses them.

The writer of the above letter, who, for the time being is Cupid's understudy, also has weapons, and he must use them. He must call on this red-haired vision of his waking dreams, and tell her of the unhappy plight into which his love for her has plunged him.

Well Worth Winning

He must be her escort on every occasion on which she will grant him the privilege; he must send her candy and flowers as if they were so many arrows; he must consult her wishes in all things, and he must so surround her with his love that she will lose all desire to ever escape from it by forgetting him in Pittsburgh.

The love of a red-haired girl is well worth the winning. Her love is fervent, like her hair. She is generous to a fault; she is warm-hearted; she is true. Her love, once won, shows more lasting qualities than the love of either a blonde or a brunette. She loves for life!

Because of all this I am sorry that the man who loves her so cuddlesingly is distant. He needs but the force of character the color of her hair indicates she possesses to become a real man. But he will never win her by sleepless nights and days that are devoted to yawns.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

There are so many cases of Consumption reported where the details above the disease started with a cold or a cough, that it is really surprising that people are not more on the lookout for these stop these apparently minor troubles. Our advice is "stop the cough or cold, if possible, without delay." Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, write Dr. Kilmer & Co., Inc., Binghamton, N. Y., Dept. A, as this man did:

221 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: I am giving you below a brief history of my case, which I trust you will use for the benefit of those who may be afflicted with similar troubles.

"About a year and a half ago I noticed that my health was rapidly failing, until at last I was unable to attend to my business. I had a severe pressure in my head and chest, I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough, and was very much afraid I was having a consumption, which, however, about this time I consulted a physician, who told me my fears were needless. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who after examining me said I was in the first stages of consumption, and at this point I started to take Anuri. Immediately I felt relief, my cough became almost immediately relieved, night sweats ceased and gradually disappeared. My weight increased 20 pounds, and I am pleased to say I am now perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been saved from large hospital and insurance companies for insurance, makes me feel very grateful to Anuri. I am pleased to say I am still enjoying good health, and am willing to corresponde with any one who would like to write me in our case."

(Sworn Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Kilmer's Anuriette is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Good for children and aged. Druggists or parcel-post prepaid from factory sale by Kilmer & Co., Inc., Binghamton, N. Y. Stores and Hospitals of Foreign Lands use Anuri and other leading drugstores. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Kennedy Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

THREE TIMES A DAY

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

They keep a gentle tapping on the animal's back with the whip that only annoys it, but does not change it out of the jog trot it wants to travel. They never whip hard, and they never cease whipping.

There was a roast of lamb for dinner. Lysander John Appleton picked up the carving knife and fork and began carving.

"You can do better job if you begin on the other side," said his wife.

"You are cutting the slices too thin," said his daughter.

"Who," asked Lysander John, "is doing this carving?"

Their Language

No reply, but his wife and daughter looked at each other and gently sighed.

A wife and daughter, by the way, can say more by looking at each other and gently sighing than a man could say in a week with the help of the government printing bureau.

Lysander John began serving the potatoes. "You are using the wrong spoon," said his wife. "You put too much on each plate," said his daughter.

Lysander John straightened up, and looked with a frown at his women folks. But he said nothing. They looked at each other and gently sighed.

"Why," said his wife a little later, "don't you ask us if we want the gravy on the meat or on the potatoes?"

"You are getting it on the tablecloth serving it that way," said his daughter.

What He Lost

Then Lysander John lost both his appetite and his temper.

"We are making these suggestions for your good," said his wife.

"You also looked at Daysey Mayme, and both gently sighed.

They were finding the reformation of man most difficult!

American Fashions for American Women

By DOROTHY DIX

In previous articles on this subject I have said that the effort that is being made to establish American fashions for American women should meet with the enthusiastic support of all of the women of the country, because:

It's patriotic. We believe that American brains and American fingers are just as clever as any in the wide world.

It's good business. It keeps millions of dollars at home and that makes for universal prosperity.

It prevents our being swindled. Most of the imported gowns and hats we buy were imported only from the work room to the sales room, and we are paying twenty or thirty dollars extra on the article for the foreign label on it.

It opens up an immense and profitable field of occupation for our girls. There is no better business a talented young woman can go into than designing and making artistic hats and dresses.

If still another argument in favor of patronizing home industries were needed, it lies in the hope that when practical, level-headed, wholesome American women and men get to work on devising garments for their compatriots the national spirit will flower in some fashion that will make the dress question less of a nightmare than it is at present.

America's Gifts

Some color is given to this hope by the fact that the only two distinctive garments that American ingenuity has so far put forth have been a boon to enslaved womanhood. These are the shirtwaist and the short skirt, and what they have meant to the sex that has been going around for ages sweltering and panting in tightly laced bodices and hampered and wholly crippled to clutch up yards and yards of trailing and microbe-gathering skirts as it walked, no tongue can tell, nor typewriter set down on paper.

Talk about emancipation! Some day we will rise up as one woman and build a monument to Susan B. Anthony, and the dressmaker who first dared to shear off the bottom of a skirt, and there is a niche in the Temple of Fame right next to those two liberators for the fashion designer who originated a costume that won't go out of style in three weeks, but that you can wear in peace of mind until the garment is worn out, without being conscious that you look like a last year's bird's nest.

This permanence in fashion is the most crying need of the day. It would enable us to buy better clothes, more artistically designed clothes, clothes of finer quality, because then when we got a dress or a hat we would be sure of getting good service out of it instead of having to cast it aside in a few weeks because skirts had suddenly widened or narrowed, or hats changed from peach baskets to Merry Widows. To a person of refined taste nothing seems more vulgar than to see a woman decked out in coarse lace, and showy satin, and bear velvet. Yet women, justify themselves in wearing these atrocities by saying that the styles change so quickly that it doesn't pay to get the real article.

The Most Economical

This is a fruitful source of extravagance, for there is no wear to shoddy goods. Every woman's experience teaches her that the cheapest dress she ever had was some fine cloth or silk that wore like leather, that came home from the cleaner's or dyer's as good as new, and that stood being made over half a dozen times. There's not a poor woman that doesn't long for some such gown, and she might have it if she didn't have to be forever changing the fashion to keep up with the vagaries of some crazy French dressmaker.

Another reason, besides economy, why there is an insistent demand for some permanency of fashion is that women are getting so many different interests now that they haven't time, nor inclination, to spend their lives in the buying or making of clothes.

The woman who is in business, the woman who is in politics, the woman who is devoting her energies to philanthropy or any other great cause, wants to be well dressed and attractively dressed, but she doesn't want to devote all of her best energies to shopping, or spend hours and hours of her valuable time in dressmaking establishments. It doesn't seem to her that it makes a particle of difference whether sleeves are an inch longer or shorter this season than last, or whether there is one plait or two in a skirt, or a bat is turned up in front this year, whereas it was turned down last year.

Her demand is for gowns that are intrinsically beautiful and suitable in themselves, that are made of fine material and on lines that are as unchangingly beautiful as the lines in the drapery of a Greek statue. She wants to be able to go to a dressmaker who is an artist, who will study her color and figure and peculiarities, who will be told for what purpose a gown is wanted, and who will design her a costume that will be above fashion and have all times and seasons for its own.

What Is Wanted

Some few women there will always be whose brains are cut on the bias and filled in the middle, and hobbled around the bottom, and who will always believe that the chief end of woman is to change her clothes, but the great majority of women are weary and sick of this eternal rush to the dressmaker.

They yearn with an unspeakable yearning to buy goods, sensible, durable clothes, such as men have, that will be appropriate for the occasion, and that, having once gotten, they can wear without change until they wear out, thereby leaving them money and leisure to do some of the other things they would like to do if it were not for the eternal dress proposition.

If this sort of a rational fashion for women—and by rational I don't mean bloomers nor Mother Hubbards—is ever invented, it will be by an American. It will be the natural expression of our practical national spirit. It's up to our own dressmakers to devise the fashions that are suitable for us. We can't import them because foreigners don't understand us, and especially they don't understand our free, independent, modest American women.

American fashions for American women! Let that be the motto of every woman who goes forth to do her shopping. Ask for American-made hats and gowns. Encourage every dressmaker that you know to do better and more artistic work, coddle the American fashion designer, as we have coddled our other infant industries, and some day an American genius will arise who will establish a standard and solve the riddle of the Sphinx by inventing a style of dress that a woman can wear as long as there's a piece of it without being considered a back number.

Being Satisfied

"YES," remarked Mrs. Briggs, placidly, "if there's one motto in my life, it's to be satisfied. I believe it's my duty, and I always try to live up to it. At first it was somewhat difficult, but a little effort soon made it natural—and you can't think of the trouble it saves!

"Now, there's my sister, She's always finding fault. If it is not with one thing it is with another. She doesn't know what satisfaction is! She had a dress made the other day, and when it came home the back panel was a trifle on one side. But it wasn't bad, and as it simply couldn't be remedied I tried to make her see how much better and easier it would be just to be content. But do you suppose she'd reason it out that way? No, indeed! She stormed and worried until she got me so worked up that I really got a headache, and she had to stay at home from the luncheon that we were to have attended, to nurse me. I was provoked, for my dress was quite perfect and I had hoped to wear it. So you see her discontent was a real injury to others!

"Then the other day she brought her small son over to my house. I never like to have him around, because he's so full of mischief. My son, Sammy, is so good when he's alone, but when his cousin comes I almost lose my mind. Sammy knows better than to touch the neighbor's flowers, but his cousin led him into picking some of them.

"The neighbor is fussy and rather a trouble maker—she has no children of her own, except a couple of grown sons and she can't appreciate a child's mind. So she came rushing over and declared that Sammy was picking the flowers and she asked if I would please speak to him; she had tried and it had had no effect! Now, Sammy always obeys after a little reasoning with him, so I knew she had been tactless. Besides, I was sure that it was not Sammy who had picked the flowers, but his cousin! I explained this to the neighbor, but she said she knew Sammy.

"My sister understands how I feel about it, so I explained to the neighbor just what sort of influence his cousin had on Sammy. I tried to make her understand that normally Sammy wouldn't do such a thing—that I had often talked with him about the advisability of not attempting to punish selfish people by taking away the things they were so selfish with and I was sure he had understood me, for he's very bright and quick to understand if you explain things to him.

"The neighbor seemed to take offence at my being candid, though she hadn't minded being candid in accusing Sammy! She was really rude, and I felt it my duty to tell her what I considered becoming behavior in a lady. It made me extremely provoked when she said that I really wasn't a judge, but I caught myself in time. Instead of losing my temper I simply excused Sammy and told him to pick all the flowers he wished—and I smiled at him gently. Really a quiet smile when you're almost angry helps you wonderfully in calming yourself!

"My neighbor was stunned! She spoke of calling the police if I didn't make the 'brat' behave—think of calling my Sammy a 'brat!' And she said she'd take the liberty of speaking him herself to make up for the hundreds of spankings he had needed and had failed to get. She talked to me, his mother, in that manner!

"My sister was angry, too, because she felt that I had accused Sammy's cousin—though, of course, I hadn't, any more than to say it was all his fault, as any one would admit! So she, completely losing her temper, sided with the neighbor and said that Sammy ought to be spanked!

"I admit that it was all I could do to hold in, but my good judgment came to my aid and I was able to smile and then quietly pick up a magazine and go on reading.

"Then I heard Sammy crying and I hastened out to see what was the matter. I found that his cousin was holding him while another boy was slapping him! I hurried down and slapped each of the boys several times to show them how it felt to Sammy. Then, without waiting to hear any of their horrid little about Sammy, I took my little son upstairs.

"When a boy is naturally gentle, bad, rough boys can't rest until they hurt him—it's been that way all the time with poor Sammy!

"My sister said a lot of hasty words, which I tried to forget, because I knew she couldn't mean them—and I just smiled at her and said that when she came back to ask my forgiveness I would give it freely! She hasn't come over since, but I know that it's because she's ashamed of her outbreak.

"Sometimes I think that if I allowed all the little trials of life to trouble me I'd be a nervous wreck—many things so nearly upset me. But why let such things trouble one? I always say to myself, 'Just be quiet and satisfied.' When I say that to myself I do not mind the small worries at all!"

PART IX.—(Continued)

BROADWAY finished and waited for her to speak.

"I ought not to want, I should not allow," said the girl. "It is my fault, too, because I never ought to marry you. I can't."

"Why not?" came from his tense lips.

"There's somebody else?"

"No."

"Then why not?"

"No, no, no."

"Tell me."

"I ought not to hurt you any more than I have done."

But Jackson persisted.

"If it's anything about me or my character, I think you ought to tell me. I want to develop. I want to be better. You're a friend of mine—you're at least that—aren't you—well, then tell me."

The Reason Why

With exquisite tenderness the girl laid her hand upon his arm as though she would assuage the hurt she was about to give.

"Then—it's because you are a—a spendthrift," she said at last, with splendid courage, her brave eyes facing him.

Roughly Broadway jerked out:

"Not—much—I am now."

There was pity in the girl's face now as she went on:

"It's in your blood. You will never be anything else. Just now you think not, but in two years from now you'll be spending what the plant has earned over and above expenses on your wonderful Broadway. It's in your blood, and I know it."

"Stuff and nonsense," broke in Broadway. "There's nothing in my blood except the decent qualities you have seen coming to the surface lately. I am not a fool—I was once—but I see things as they are now."

"You can't help yourself," went on the girl in a low, mooning way, "it's in your blood—your grandfather——"

Grandfather's Fling

Broadway's belief in himself received a momentary setback. His grandfather! What could the girl mean? Why, his grandfather had been the most staid of men. If he had had a fault it had been that he had remained in his home too closely and had paid to much attention to the dictates of his wife.

"What do you mean about my grandfather?" he asked. "He was in bed every night at 10 o'clock!"

If any other persons had been involved, Broadway would have had a hilarious moment at the strange course this wooing was taking.

"Your grandfather was a spendthrift," went on the determined girl. "I have been told the story and I know that it's true. Your grandfather after he had been married just two years went to New York and Broadway."

"How long did he stay?" demanded Jackson.

"Two weeks."

"Well, there you see."

"He didn't come back," went on the girl, "until your grandmother went to New York herself and got him out of the Astor House, where he had a room at $6 a day."

"There you see," repeated Broadway, "two weeks at $6 a day isn't much."

"But He Came Back"

"But it was the attitude he took," said Josie, "and for a man in his position then, and the times he lived in, it was almost as much as spending a small fortune would be now."

"But, you see," said Jackson, "he really came back after all."

"He came back because his wife took him," explained Josie, "and he stayed at home after that only because for the rest of their lives she henpecked him into staying."

She was smiling through tears now.

"You really wouldn't want to be henpecked and made a man of in that way," she said with another of her moments of exquisite drollery. "A henpecked-manhas always been the nemis of the pecks."

While the, to him absurd quality of what the girl was saying had not been lost upon Jackson in the earlier moments of their talk, yet the real basis of her truly feminine words had its effect upon him. There was some truth in it all. While he, as of a later and more sophisticated generation, might smile at that long ago extravagance of the Astor House and the $6 a day, he reflected that his grandfather probably had not smiled at it. It had been in a sense deadly serious with him. It had represented to his grandfather the top of the imagination, the utmost crest of a wave of wilful folly, a foolish and daring thing for a man of his grandfather's period, and here and head in that elemental countryside of long ago.

Perhaps Josie was right. Looking back upon his own monumental folly—which had never loomed larger than today—Broadway saw that heredity could account for it very easily.

Then into his mood, his warring mental impulses, came the words that Josie had spoken on the night of their first meeting when she had given him the little package of wafers made in his own plant:

"Hand it down to your children, and to your children's children, and so on—and so on ——."

What should he hand down to his children?

"She is right," he thought, "it's in my blood. Hand down to my children? I'll never hand them a lemon."

And in an agony of spirit his head sank.

But even in that bitterness he knew that Josie had come very close to him and that her hands lay almost upon his shoulders.

PART X

Josie Is Puzzled

THEN for one flash of time something primal beat in the being of the man. His arms stiffened as their muscles prepared to seize and hold this woman, and there came the moral hazards of life with him. Not only the spendthrift had been dissolved in the solvent of his new attitude toward himself, but the old selfishness had gone.

The Important Things

Then came lowly, brokenly, grief embalmed in every word, those tones that had the power of moving Jackson as neither God nor man had:

"I must have seemed to you—to be leading you—on—I was leading you on—because I wanted—I want your—oh, when I put away the spectre of your ancestor I wanted only you—Jackson—only you. But it wouldn't be right. There are other things in the world more important than just ourselves—our personal characters—the good we must do rests upon them—we couldn't, we can't——"

She stopped, her breast rising and falling convulsively. Then for a moment the eyes of Broadway clung to hers. There was nothing between their souls. These two suffered, yet grew calm upon the broad plain of a mutual renunciation.

* * *

The hearty voices of Bob and his father, now in perfect understanding, came from the road, as the two walked to the gate of Jones Manor. And at the same time the judge and his wife and Clara drew near to Josie and Jackson, too. Even the judge's wife was willing to agree that Jackson and Josie had had all the time in the world.

As the younger Wallace entered through the gate he was saying:

"The town itself has a population of about four thousand. The plant employs over seven hundred of them."

Then seeing Jackson standing with Josie, he added:

"Oh, here's Jackson now. Tell the governor all about it, will you? Tell him how you turned down the trust's million and a half, too."

"What—a million—er yes—why, of course," faltered out Jackson, neither knowing what his friend had said nor what he himself was saying.

While Josie turned instinctively and hurriedly to step gently her fingtips of drying into the maternal arms of Mrs. Spotswood, the elder Wallace, who was too intent upon the business matter before him to notice anything else, said to Jackson:

His Course Approved

"Mr. Jones, my son has just told me of the grand single-handed fight you're making against this giant corporation. I admire your pluck, sir. You deserve all the encouragement and assistance possible. Believe me, the Dingbie Advertising Company is with you heart and soul. Your loyalty to the people of this town is commendable, sir. You deserve great credit, and I want to shake your hand."

Jackson was now able to reply, and the new youth that he had become was quick to give proper credit.

"Thanks, Mr. Wallace," he said, "but much of the real credit is due to Bob."

"My son has told me of your modesty," said the father, "but do not attempt to deceive me. He has also told me of your wonderful business punch—something, Bob has lacked, and something that I have longed to see him develop. I am very proud that you have taken him into the firm, and if advertising has any market value, we'll fight them to the finish. I have promised my son to return here Monday morning. I may have a proposition to put before you. I'd like to see him an equal partner in a business with such a promising future."

"I don't know what to say, Mr. Wallace," said Jackson.

Wallace senior misunderstood him, and assumed that Jackson was putting him off.

A New Mystery

"Oh, Monday's time enough," he said. "I have an appointment with Pembroke at his house tomorrow. After ten minutes' talk with me I promise you the Consolidated people will make no further attempts to shear us."

The old Broadway Jones or the new one in his infancy would have thought that this speech opened the gates of all possibilities, but the new one did not, since it meant that there was to be less of hardship, less of peril, in the undertaking he was to set for himself. Indeed, this, in the mood of Josie and himself, would only be another barrier between them.

However, Jackson chunked father and son, and soon the first dinner party of Broadway in Jones Manor was at an end. Bob went home with Clara, the Judge and his wife, together with Josie, and the elder Wallace started off in the touring car in which he had come from New York.

Jackson looked at Josie, as, close to Mrs. Spotswood, she wished him the conventional good-night. There was still an other and a new expression in her face. She regarded Jackson as though he had developed some quality she could not understand, but Jackson couldn't penetrate further into this new mystery.

Some of Fashion's Latest From Paris

Original shape of beret, made of chestnut velvet. It is outlined over the brim by a draped ribbon, "a picots" of faille, tied over the side in a huge bow and held by a broad gilt buckle.

The long picture at the side shows a very original tailor-made costume of olive-green ratine—a long redingote, with broad revers slightly gathered at the waistline on both sides—fastens by a stitched girdle-sash of the same material, with a band of white checkered ratine held by a nacre buckle. Collar, cuff and band at the ham are of white fox. This redingote, rising in front, shows a simple skirt of white ratine, checkered with green.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A story about Signor Marconi has been floating round Stock Exchange circles.

Mr. Marconi, at a dinner in Newport, was once seated beside a lady who, mixing him with his compatriot, Mascagni, said:

"Oh, I'd love to hear you play your beautiful 'Intermezzo.'"

"I'll do it," the inventor answered, promptly, "if you've got a wireless piano."

"Daughter," said father on Sunday morning, "I trust that you will go to church tonight. The theme, 'An Hour with Favorite Hymns,' should be very interesting."

"Father," said the daughter, with a smile, "I should like very much to go, but I have made an engagement to spend several hours with my favorite him this evening."

Private Jimson was relating his experiences of the Boer war. He said he was once taken prisoner and the Boers stripped him of all his clothing.

"Did you feel the cold much?" asked a pal.

"No," replied Jimson, "not at all. You see, they carefully covered me with their rifles."

A mission warper in New Orleans was visiting a reformatory near that city not long ago, when she observed among the inmates an old acquaintance, a negro lad long thought to be a model of integrity.

"Jim!" exclaimed the mission worker. "Is it possible I find you here?"

The visitor sighed.

"You, Jim?" she repeated. "I am surprised!"

"Yassum," said Jim. "So was I, or I wouldn't be here."

"There seems to be a strange affinity between a donkey and a chicken. I wonder why?" said Jones.

"Naturally enough," replied Brown. "One is descended from Ham and the other from eggs."

Do You Know That—

The Rev. F. B. Meyer has been declaring at Leeds, Eng., that he does not seriously object to a "little courting" in chapel. One recalls an incident in Midland chapel some years ago. The preacher was annoyed by the sound of whispering coming from the semi-darkness, under one of the galleries. At last he paused in his sermon and declared: "If the young couple making love under the gallery do not come to me in the vestry before service next Sunday morning, I will name them to the church." It was a chance shot, but next Sunday he found twenty couples awaiting him in the vestry!

A pet rat was carried in the funeral procession of Frau Louca at Neukolln, the animal being subsequently interred in the same grave with the dead woman. This was done in accordance with the last wishes of Frau Louca, who in her will referred to the cat as the truest friend she had during the last fifteen years. At the cemetery the animal was killed by a shot in the head, and the carcass, enveloped in laurel leaves, dropped into her mistress's grave.

A retired British soldier, Mr. Frederick Irvine, who was wounded at the relief of Ladysmith, has just been discharged from the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, after a remarkable operation. A Boer bullet, wrapped in a shred of his pierced tunic, was found to have lodged just within an inch of his heart, and was extracted after remaining there for twelve years.

Smoking in Church

THE notice put up by the vicar of Lancaster forbidding visitors to smoke in the church reminds a contemporary that one or two centuries ago smoking in church was the practice in England. Wooden spittoons filled with sawdust were placed about the church for the smokers, and they sometimes left their long clays, or "churchwardens," in the care of the verger until the next Sunday came round.

It is told of the incumbent of a Warwickshire church that he used to smoke regularly in the vestry while the congregation were singing the hymn before the sermon. He made a point of selecting a long hymn to give himself time to get through his pipe. "My people," he said, "like long hymns, but I prefer a long pipe."

Stock Prices; Financial News

Stock Markets Lower at Opening; Foreign Situation Disturbing; Light Trading.

STATE STREET, Nov. 25.—The local market was quiet at the opening and prices were generally unchanged from Saturday's final. There was very little trading and, with the exception of Shannon, which advanced ½, the market tendency was toward lower prices. Between 10:30 and 11 o'clock the Boston ticker scarcely moved, and at the end of the hour bore a few of the declines were: Butte-Superior ⅝, Mayflower ½ and Chino ⅛. Granby, and Greene Cananea were unchanged.

New York Opening.

There was considerable selling at the opening of the New York stock market today with the result that nearly all issues were lower. Canadian Pacific showed the largest decline, opening at 203¾, or 1-3 below Saturday's opening. Among the other losses were: Amalgamated Copper, ⅝; American Can, ½; American Car & Foundry, ¾; American Cotton Oil, ¼; American Locomotive, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; United States Steel, common, ⅝; Union Pacific, ½; Bending, ¾; Southern Pacific, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¼; New York Central, ⅝; Missouri Pacific, ⅝; Mexican Petroleum, ¼; Lehigh Valley, ⅝; Great Northern, preferred, ⅛; Erie, common, ⅛; Distillers' Securities, ⅝; St. Paul, ⅛; Baltimore & Ohio, ⅜, and D. R. T., ⅛. U. S. Rubber was up ⅛. The selling resulted from the gravity of the European situation.

Outlook for Lake Copper.

While the Lake Copper property may be developing slowly, the work is being thoroughly done, with the best of equipment and management. Lake underground developments have been disappointing in so far as it has been thoroughly demonstrated that the fractured character of the lode precludes the making of a big property. This is frankly admitted by the Lake management.

With the present equipment the Lake should be able eventually to be placed on a production of 1,000,000 pounds of copper per month, and be able to maintain this production for a ten-year period. It is therefore possible to figure that on an average of fifteen cents per pound for copper for ten years, there may be possible net earnings of nearly twice the present selling value of the shares.

Engineers who have examined the property say that apparently the Lake lode is in the shape of a horseshoe, or more likely a bowl, and it is possible to do more or less figuring on tonnage which would indicate a life of not much more than ten years on a production basis of 2,000 tons per day, for which the property is equipped.

Wheeling & Lake Erie.

News that Wheeling & Lake Erie will, within the next year purchase 3,500 freight cars, and from twenty to thirty locomotives, should be good news to shareholders. The road has been making an excellent showing in earnings, but has been handicapped to a great extent by lack of equipment facilities. Its hire of equipment charges have been at the rate of 4 a little over $1,000,000 per year. These charges are increasing as business expands, but with the delivery of equipment ordered these charges will not only be saved, but the new working expenses to grow should be lowered, with consequent benefit to net returns.

New York Cotton Markets.

Bearish cables were ignored at the opening of the cotton market today and first prices were seven points lower and one point higher. Immediately after the call a buying movement set in and prices were carried ten point above Saturday's closing. Futures and spot in Liverpool were barely steady.

Foreign Financial News.

London copper warrants were easy at the opening with spot £78, 6d. lower at £77 and futures £18, 3d. lower at £77½.

The Bank of England bought the £900,000 South African gold offered in the open market today, at the minimum mint price of 77s. 9d.

Settlement restrictions caused heaviness and irregularity in the London securities market. The impression prevailed, however, that the reports of the Austro-Russian strain were exaggerated.

Domestic issues rallied after a selling movement, but American railway shares and Canadian Pacific became weaker on local and Berlin refilling sales. Foreigners showed hesitancy.

Mines were checkered with contangoing in process. De Beers off ¼ at 20⅝. Rio Tintos off ⅛ net at 74⅝.

GUARD WARREN MILL FROM STRIKE RIOT

WEST WARREN, Nov. 25.—Ten extra policemen were added to the force here today as a precautionary measure against the threatened riot at the Warren cotton mills, where there is a strike. It was reported that between 300 and 400 operatives would return to work, and that they would be prevented. Threats of shooting were made in this connection, and Chief of Police Frank L. Thompson increased his regular force of twelve men to be ready for any emergency that might arise.

Widow Asks for Man's Return

Cannot Get War Pension Until J. A. Smith Comes to Her Aid.

Mrs. Allie M. Smith of No. 56 Roxbury street, Spanish War veteran's widow, and her eldest son, Eldridge, seven. She is expecting a pension, but lacks one witness, her late husband's brother, James A. Smith. She asks him to come forward and help save her babies from want.

In order that she may secure a pension to keep herself and her three children from want or starvation, Mrs. Allie M. Smith of No. 56 Roxbury street, has appealed to the AMERICAN for help in finding her brother-in-law, James A. Smith, a man about forty, who formerly lived on Shawmut avenue, but whom she has not heard from for two years.

Mrs. Smith's story is a sad one—a story of the injustices and hardships that the delays of government procedure must often work.

In 1902, she married William Smith. He had been married before, but his first wife, Martha Amelia Smith, died in 1881.

Smith had served in the Spanish-American war, in a regiment that helped conquer Cuba. Mrs. Smith was a Virginia girl.

There were three children, Eldridge, now seven years old, Bunnie, six years old, and William, three. The little family was happy and prosperous.

But in 1910, Mr. Smith died, and while his earnings had been ample to live by, they could be had been able to lay aside very little.

Will died September 8, 1910. I knew I would have to get something to live on, so on September 7, 1910, I applied for a pension.

While my application was being investigated, I went home to Virginia. I stayed there, working and helping out at home, but there wasn't enough to go round, and they couldn't keep me any longer.

So I came back to Boston and went to Major F. A. Bicknell in the pension department at the State House for help.

I found we had to prove the death of Will's first wife. She died in Rochester, N. Y. Her name was Martha Amelia Smith.

We sent for the death certificate, and it came made out "Martha A. Smith."

We sent it in that way, but there was some trouble, and we got a letter from the department pointing out that my application said my husband's first wife's name ing been Amelia Smith.

That meant the death certificate was no good, so I will have to prove the death by some witness.

The only one I know who can prove it is James Smith, my husband's brother. I haven't heard of him for two years. He is a machinist, and may be working in Boston or New England.

SUES EMMONS ON REALTY CASE

Judge William H. H. Emmons, former Boston police commissioner, his wife, and son, Paul D. Emmons, were named as defendants in a suit brought by Levi Fishman, who charged that through the action of the defendants he was deprived of a $1,500 equity in some real estate situated in Roxbury.

Judge Hardy, of the Equity motion session, in Suffolk County, issued an injunction, preventing the defendants from encumbering the property until a hearing.

Fishman alleges in his bill that he purchased a parcel of property on June 9, 1910, situated at the corner of Albany and Randall Streets, Roxbury. It was subject to a mortgage of $3,200 held by the executors and trustees of Nehemiah W. Rice. He claims he have paid all interest on the mortgage and to have reduced the principal by $250.

David H. Greenhood, who was to purchase the property from him employed Judge Emmons to examine the title. Fishman alleges that Judge Emmons went to the executors and trustees of the estate October 7, 1912, and on the payment of $2,500, accepted from them an assignment of the property to his wife, who gave her husband the power of attorney to sell the property for a breach of conditions of the mortgage.

On November 11 the property was sold to Paul D. Emmons for $2,130. He then deeded it to D. J. Ahearn, also named as a defendant in the suit.

Ahearn then immediately transferred the property to Judge Emmons. Fishman claims that he had no knowledge of the foreclosure proceedings and sale, and that the property is worth a much larger sum than was obtained for it.

INDIAN CHIEFS AT CHICAGO INITIATION

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—In a wild, weird setting fashioned after aboriginal scene in the great Northwest, twelve prominent Chicagoans were initiated into the mysterious national order of "Spanish Athletes" at the Hotel Sherman. Delegates from every section of the country were present, headed by Louis W. Hill of the great Northern Railway, known in the novel ceremonies as "Chief of Toreadors." Twenty Indian chiefs from the Blackfoot Reservation at Glacier National Park conducted the mystic ceremonies.

TWO RAILROAD MEN KILLED UNDER AUTO

ST. PAUL, Nov. 25.—Howard James, vice-president of the Great Northern Railroad and nephew of the late Marshall Field of Chicago, and Samuel B. Hunter, purchasing agent of the Great Northern, were killed today from an accident to the automobile in which they were riding. The machine refused to climb a sand-filled grade and slowly toppled over.

STATE PRISON HAS BUT 747 INMATES

Because of the rapid decrease in the population of the State prison at Charlestown it has been found necessary to close down the paper box factory, which has been in operation for over a dozen years. The number of prisoners now is 747, the smallest in fifteen years, having dropped in the past year from 852, which was the high water mark.

SAYS "DAKOTA" RECOGNIZED HIM

CAMBRIDGE COURTHOUSE, Nov. 25.—Wilton F. Buckman of Melrose, an engineer on the Boston & Maine and a boyhood playmate of Daniel Blake Russell, was the first witness in the noted Russell will case today.

He said that his first meeting with Daniel Blake Russell was in the Lynde strawberry patch and he knew William C. Russell, but not as a playmate.

He said he saw Dakota Dan about two months ago and that the latter immediately recognized him, but could not recall his name.

Several incidents of their boyhood days were recalled by the claimant, facts that made the witness positive that he was Daniel Blake Russell. One of the incidents that was used to test the claimant was a boyhood fishing trip, in the escapement of which both Mr. Buckman and Daniel Blake Russell fell into the water, getting a severe wetting.

The witness told of another occasion when they were fishing for bornport. He told of pulling out a large bornport which struck Daniel Blake Russell in the back of the neck inflicting a wound that caused a scar.

HOLD SUSPECT IN CLUBBING OUTRAGE

PITCHBURG, Nov. 25—John Fisher, thirty-five, of Pawtucket, R. I., was arraigned in the police court today on the charge of attacking Mrs. Mattie Laitala. After pleading not guilty, Fisher was held in $5,000 for December 9, pending the outcome of injuries received by Mrs. Laitala. The assault took place on Saturday morning. Mrs. Laitala was badly beaten and her unconscious body, her skull was fractured. At the Burbank Hospital, where Mrs. Laitala is on the dangerous list, it was said today she had an even chance for recovery.

SWEARS ZELIG HIRED SLAYERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Investigation is being made today of the reported statement of "Red Phil" Davidson in Sing Sing prison that he had been given $500 by "Big Jack" Zelig to kill Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, for instigating whose murder Charles A. Becker is under sentence of death.

Davidson was sentenced to from twenty years to life for killing Zelig. Davidson asserts that Becker was innocent of any desire to have Rosenthal killed and that the gambler's death was due directly to Jack Rose, Harry Vallon and Louis Weller, who employed gunmen from Zelig to do the killing.

According to Davidson, Zelig came to him and gave him $500, a part of $5,000 which Zelig had received from Rose, Vallon and Weller, as a fee for the slaying of Rosenthal. Davidson says he declined to "croak" Rosenthal.

Joseph A. Shay, Becker's lawyer, is said to be preparing to use Davidson's confession in his appeal for a new trial for the convicted policeman.

FINED $170 ON MILK AND CREAM CHARGE

Charged with having removed the cream from a milk and also with selling skim milk that was below the standard, the Elm Farm Milk Company today was fined $170 in the Dorchester Court. The cases were appealed and the company was held in $300 bail: The complaint was made by Professor James O. Jordin of the Bureau of Milk Inspection. M. Weiner of No. 91 Topliff street, Dorchester, was fined $20 on two complaints that he had sold butter that had been renovated and that had not been properly stamped. He appealed and was held in $200 bail.

How Can They Be RAILROAD MEN—

When, Instead of Working at Railroads, They Are Fighting and Swindling One Another?

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

You need not be surprised because people are killed every little while on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad system.

The men that run the New Haven railroad system are not railroad men.

THEY ARE STOCK JOBBERS, SPECULATORS, GAMBLERS.

The men in power in our railroads today devote, perhaps, one per cent of their ability TO THE RAILROAD BUSINESS, and ninety-nine per cent of their ability to fighting one another.

We are not writing this to make any special protest against the killings on the New Haven railroad. It seems to be generally understood that the New Haven railroad can kill people by letting the ties rot to save money and having bad rails to save money or by ignoring the railroad business entirely.

What we want to get into the minds of our readers is this fact:

The men that manage our railroads are not actually managing railroads. THEY ARE FIGHTING WITH OTHER MEN IN THE RAILROAD BUSINESS.

They are using their brains to steal business from one another.

They are using their brains to keep other men from building better railroads, and not as railroad men, not as constructors or managers of public highways, but as managers of stock companies.

Suppose the managers of our Post Office, instead of thinking about carrying the mail all over the country, were thinking about fighting and tricking other post office companies.

Suppose the Navy of the United States, instead of devoting its attention to producing the best boats and the best gunners, were competing with some other concern inside of our own territory trying to get business instead of trying to build up a good navy.

We have an extraordinarily fine navy and the best gunners in the world—because our Navy Department is intent simply on having a good navy.

We have, considering all things, in this country a marvellous Post Office administration—especially good, and better than it ever has been, under the management of Postmaster-General Hitchcock and William H. Taft. What would that Post Office amount to if, instead of looking after post office business and reducing rates, it were competing with half a dozen other post office companies?

The Post Office is what it is because IT HAS A MONOPOLY, and the people own that monopoly.

Our navy and our army, efficient, honestly managed, capable, are what they are BECAUSE THE PEOPLE GIVE TO THE ARMY AND TO THE NAVY A MONOPOLY, and the public owns that monopoly.

We have reached, or we shall very soon reach, a point at which our railroads, like our Post Office, should be a monopoly, owned by the people.

When our railroads are owned by the people, managed by the people, the officials who do the work getting very big pay, and no private individual getting anything, then we shall have real railroads.

Today a man like Morgan, or some other man, having nothing whatever to do with actual railroad management, makes tens of millions out of railroads, and the traffic managers, the freight managers, the real workers of the railroads, get a small, miserable salary. And the men are hired by the railroads NOT TO SUPPLY THE PUBLIC WITH THE BEST POSSIBLE RAILROADS, but to supply private owners with the most profitable railroads.

Owned by the Government, managed as a railroad and not as a stock-jobbing concern, it would stop killing people and give good service.

Believe as you choose about immediate measures. — Believe, if you choose—and you may be right—that the public is too ignorant, and human nature too base, to make public ownership on a big scale possible yet.

But be perfectly sure that we shall not have good service in this country—good railroads, good telegraphs, good telephones—until we have a monopoly, OWNED BY THE PEOPLE, MANAGED FOR THE PEOPLE, PAYING SALARIES HIGHER THAN EVER HAVE BEEN SEEN FOR REALLY COMPETENT MEN—AND NOT A DOLLAR TO STOCK JOBBERS AND OWNERS WHO DO NOTHING.

Public Ownership Discourages Vice

Private Ownership Thrives Upon Vice and Encourages It.

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

The different telegraph and telephone systems of the United States are owned by private individuals.

If you want to know the difference between public ownership and private ownership of national necessities and monopolies, CONSIDER THE ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES POST OFFICE IN DEALING WITH CRIMINALS, AND THE ATTITUDE OF THE PRIVATE TELEPHONE OR TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.

The United States Post Office has just completed a great nation-wide attack upon the criminals of a dangerous kind.

Caught in the dragnet of the Government are one hundred and fifty men and women, guilty of advertising, selling and distributing through the mails "obscene drugs," murderous instruments and other vicious paraphernalia.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock and the others managing the Post Office are to be congratulated upon this excellent use of a Government monopoly, upon this determined and successful effort to discourage vice and crime.

It is because the Government has a MONOPOLY of the Post Office,

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE AMERICAN "RADICAL IN FIGHTING FOR PRINCIPLES; CONSERVATIVE IN REMEDYING EVILS."

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The AMERICAN has a long line of victories to its credit. It is unquestionably the most progressive paper published. I know it is the most fearless.

You are radical in your fight for principles, and yet conservative in your recommendation of remedies for existing evils.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I am writing to you in fears of great joy after reading your article on "Woman Suffrage." Thanks and thanks for your beautiful words. It makes a womanly woman feel so happy to know men with great minds believe in us.

Your words are all so wonderfully beautiful I cannot express my joy and gratitude for your great support and the help you are giving us. Yours for success.

DO YOUR SHOPPING EARLY

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The early shopping idea is a good one, and may it go into force more effectively than ever before.

Save time, labor and trouble by shopping early. Avoid the pace that kills, the wear and tear of nerve and energy.

The more gradual shopping, busy, steady, serves the purpose to better advantage, than the hustle and hurry of rush makes waste.

Do your shopping early, and thereby enhance the value of Christmas cheer.

MAX HENRY NEWMAN.

Public Ownership Discourages Vice

because it has the power to punish the criminals, because it has access to the mail of criminals, THAT THE POST OFFICE CAN JAIL ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY CRIMINALS IN ONE DAY, AND FRIGHTEN THOUSANDS OF OTHERS.

The telegraph companies made a very large revenue from the racetrack gamblers—all of them criminals.

And far from helping the public to fight the gambling criminals it was necessary for the public to fight the telegraph companies, in order to discourage crime with the telegraph wires as an aid.

Bucket shops, immoral resorts of all kinds, ANY CRIMINAL WITH THE MONEY TO PAY, can get what he wants from a private monopoly, telegraph, telephone or railroad.

The president of the corporation is able to talk about his duty to his stockholders, or to plead ignorance, and the mistakes of those below him.

The subordinate depends upon his salary and hopes for an increase. And he knows that the way to get more money IS TO PRODUCE MORE REVENUE.

He is not thinking of disturbing vice; his mind is on INCREASE IN DIVIDENDS.

Nobody ever saw a telegraph or a telephone company make any effort to expose or trace any criminals that carry on their trade with the aid of the telegraph and the telephone.

In the hands of the Government these great monopolies would give service to the public for less than a quarter of present prices.

And these great monopolies, like the Post Office, instead of being tools used by criminals, would become powerful aids for uncovering crime and punishing crime.

It may come slowly, but IT WILL COME.

The people will realize that they must own those necessities, those monopolies, which are valuable simply because so many people build them up.

The people will realize that by public ownership they will protect themselves, diminish cost, increase service, make the distant farmhouse as accessible as the big city hotel, increase equality, comfort and discourage vice.

And may the day soon come when all other public monopolies, intelligently managed, by competent men, highly paid, will really work for the people—instead of working to increase the unnecessary wealth of a few, regardless of the public welfare!

A Prayer By Genevieve Brady

O THOU GREAT CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE, pervading all space, permeating all substance, and placing in all life the spark of Thy Divinity, may I, in claiming my inheritance, know Love without lust; Joy without jealousy; Tenderness without weakness; Kindness without selfishness; Dignity without arrogance; and Truth without dogmatism.

PICKING A HUSBAND

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

"I advise all girls to be careful when they choose life partners."—An actress who has had four.

SINCE wedded existence is often
A matter of months—or of years,
Be advised when you start an affair of the heart
That you can't be too careful, my dears.
With patience and judgment—and practice—
Your life may finally make
A dream of delight if you'll only sit tight
And profit by every mistake.

Sometimes one's new husband has failings
Upon which she never has reckoned;
But if haply your First has a troublesome thirst,
Why, choose a teetotaling Second.
And if HE proves overflirtatious
(For such horrid husbands there be),
Pick a smile-proof old scout with a bad case of gout
When a chance comes to wed Number Three.

And if you can't live with the latter
Without a continuous war,
Find a jovial gent who is steeped in content,
And make him Experiment Four.
And don't be cast down or discouraged
If this last romance does not thrive,
Past the future's dim gates there's a fond heart awaits—
Awaits to be your Number Five.

But always select with discretion,
For wedlock's a solemn affair,
And a lady must use, when her cue is to choose,
With the wisest and weightiest care.
Just marry 'em early and often,
As our happiest women have done,
It may not be the Seventh, or Ninth, or Eleventh,
But some day you'll find the Right One.
